Trade adjustment survey begun

The United States Department of Labor has begun a series of investigations to determine if workers at two Southeast Missouri plants are eligible to apply for trade adjustment assistance.

The plants in question are the International Hat Co. plant in Dexter which manufactures straw beach hats and the Prairie Manufacturing Co. of East Prairie which manufactures women's clothing.

Petitions for adjustment assistance were filed with the department during the period April 12 through May 10.

The labor department's investigations, which will be completed within 60 days, will seek to determine if increased imports contributed importantly to the unemployment of a significant number of workers at the plants in question.

If so, the department may certify that the affected workers are eligible to apply for adjustment assistance.

Assistance to workers under the Trade Act of 1974 may include cash trade readjustment allowances, training, testing, counseling, job placement, job search grants and relocation allowances.

2 charged with rape

EAST PRAIRIE— Two counts of statutory rape have been filed against two East Prairie men and a warrant has been issued for a third, Deputy Sheriff Dennis Turley reported today.

Gee B. "Bounce" Johnson, 55, and James E. Martin, 57, were arrested Wednesday on two counts of statutory rape allegedly involving two East Prairie girls ages 13 and 14.

Turley said the girls were picked up by Martin Tuesday morning and taken to the Belmont Ferry Landing at the Mississippi River in a camper truck, where an alleged offense occurred.

Later, they were taken to a house at East Prairie, where the second offense reportedly occurred.

The two men were arrested by Turley and Juvenile Officer Gordon Galemore, who released the girls to their parents' custody.

The third suspect, also of East Prairie, was to be picked up today on a warrant charging him with one count of statutory rape.

Johnson was released this morning on $2,500 bond and Martin remained in custody on the same amount.

Lindbergh's flight was 50 years ago today

Through a morning mist 50 years ago today, a 25-year-old Midwestern mail pilot bounced his frail monoplane down a Long Island runway and headed, alone, for Newfoundland and then the sea.

Thirty-three and a half hours later he arrived in Paris. He asked for a bath and a glass of milk. He introduced himself — "I am Charles Lindbergh." He thought the frenzied welcomers might mistake him for someone else.

But he was a legend already, this shy, practical man who had to borrow a suit for the ceremonies. If only as a harbinger of the future, the people of the time could sense how his feat had brought Europe and America closer and had stimulated the future of aviation.

Fifty years later, Lindbergh's epic solo flight is well remembered — in San Diego, where the Ryan Airlines Co. built his plane, "the Spirit of St. Louis;" in St. Louis itself, where businessmen had put up the money for the flight; at Roosevelt Field on Long Island, where the flight began; and in New York City, where businessman Raymond Orteig had offered the $25,000 prize that prompted the flight, and where Lindbergh was welcomed later with a triumphal parade.

The flight is remembered, too, in Paris, the city where Lindbergh stepped bone-weary into the limelight. The celebrity that began that day never left him, and it brought great tragedy as well as rewards.

The ceremonies in St. Louis and the New York area both began at 7:52 a.m. today, with the ascent of tiny airplanes into the air.

In St. Louis the plane is a $100,000 replica of the Spirit of St. Louis, which will later tour a number of American cities.

At the eastern end of what was Roosevelt Field on Long Island, now a shopping center, and near the spot from which Lindbergh took off, the plane is a sister ship of his monoplane, a Ryan Brougham recently purchased for $75,000 by the Friends of the Nassau County Museum.

It will appear in another air show on Long Island Saturday and Sunday, and will be shipped to France for the Paris Air Show, which starts June 2.

Another replica, the one used in the film "The Spirit of St. Louis," will fly past a theater in East Meadow, L.I., at 11 a.m. today. Anne Morrow Lindbergh, the aviator's widow, will christen a new Pan American plane, "The Charles A. Lindbergh," at Kennedy airport in New York.

The christening is one of three appearances in New York for Mrs. Lindbergh — the climactic one a speech at a dinner

April food prices increase 1.5 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another big jump in the cost of food pushed consumer prices up eight-tenths of 1 per cent in April, the third big monthly rise in consumer prices this year, the government reported today.

Food prices rose 1.5 per cent during the month, more than twice the March increase of six-tenths of 1 per cent. A major cause of the food price rise was the 13.1 per cent increase in the price of ground coffee, the government said.

The April increase in consumer prices, equivalent to an annual rate of nearly 10 per cent, showed inflation will continue to be a major economic problem for the Carter administration in the months ahead.

However, administration economists remain confident that spiraling food costs will slow down later this year, easing the over-all pressure on consumers' pocketbooks.

The Labor Department said its consumer price index for April stood at 179.6 of the 1967 average of 100, meaning that goods priced at $100 10 years ago cost $179.60 last month.

Consumer prices last month were 6.8 per cent higher than in April of 1976.

The April surge in consumer prices followed a six-tenths of 1 per cent gain in March, when food prices also increased by six-tenths of 1 per cent. The April increase put the price rises back at the worrisome levels of February when they rose 1 per cent and January when they rose eight-tenths of 1 per cent. For the year, consumer prices have increased 3.2 per cent.

But the Labor Department saw some good news in the report. It said that excluding food and energy items, prices rose six-tenths of 1 per cent in April, about the same as in February and March and less than in January.

In addition, commodities prices other than food increased four-tenths of 1 per cent, matching the March figures and considered by economists to be an acceptable increase.

Economists look to prices of nonfood commodities for evidence of the underlying rate of inflation in the economy, since food prices are volatile and subject to wide swings from month to month.

The Carter administration now is forecasting an over-all increase in consumer prices this year of 6.7 per cent, compared with a 4.8 per cent consumer price hike in 1976.

The effects of the severe winter showed up in the April price index in sharply higher prices for onions, cucumbers, green peppers and tomatoes. The Labor Department said supplies of these foods from Florida were limited due to the freezing weather earlier this year.

Besides higher prices for coffee and vegetables, costs also increased for pork, cereal, bakery products, sugar and sweets. Prices of eggs and fresh fruits declined.

There were also higher prices during the month for transportation services, up 1 per cent, and for medical care services, up nine-tenths of 1 per cent. The increase in transportation services was blamed on a large hike in auto insurance costs.

Prices of fuel oil and coal rose nine-tenths of 1 per cent and used-car prices advanced four-tenths of 1 per cent, which in both cases was less than in recent months.

P&Z asks for ordinance requiring lot surveys

The Planning and Zoning Commission Thursday night requested an ordinance requiring a lot survey or a liability release form before a building permit can be issued for a new home and recommended a list of proposed truck routes.

A group of Helen street area residents again protested the lack of a stop sign at Helen and Pine streets.

The commission also approved a modification in the city ordinance concerning home occupation regulations, tabled another annexation request and approved two rezoning requests.

Lot Surveys

The commission asked City Manager Charles Church to draw up an ordinance requiring property owners seeking a building permit for a new home to either have a lot survey made by a licensed surveyor or sign a letter releasing the city from liability, should the lot lines not be where the property owner thinks they are. The ordinance would also give the city building inspector the right to order a survey before issuing the permit if he is not satisfied with the property line markings.

The city decided it needed something done about lot lines after a house was built on Shelby Drive on an improperly marked lot. The house turned out to be too close to the property lines and in violation of building requirements.

Commissioners agreed that the ordinance will have little effect on property owners in new subdivisions where the property lines are clearly marked and in older sections of town which are nearly filled up.

Truck routes

The commission recommended the City Council adopt a truck route ordinance that would restrict trucks to certain streets, except to make local deliveries.

The proposed truck routes are: Malone Avenue from Marian Avenue to the west city limits, Salcedo Road from North Main Street to the west city limits, Murray Lane from South West Street to South Main Street, Ables Road from Ingram Street to Route AA, Route AA from Ables Road to south city limits, County Line Road from Route AA to Keystone Drive, Compress Road from North West Street to the west city limits, South West Street from Murray Lane to Malone Avenue, North West Street from Malone Avenue to Salcedo Road, Davis Blvd. from North Street to Wakefield Street, Wakefield Street from North West Street to Davis Blvd., North Main Street from Malone Avenue to the north city limits, South Main Street, from Malone Avenue to the south city limits, North Ingram Street from Malone Avenue to the north city limits and South Ingram Street from Malone Avenue to the Ables Road, Keystone Drive from County Line Road to Highway 60, Illinois Avenue from Ables Road to County Line Road, North Street from North West Street tro Davis Blvd., and Lynn Street from Airport Drive to Pine Street.

Gun taken from store recovered

One of the guns stolen last Sunday from Homestead Distributing Co., has been recovered following the arrest of two Chicago, Ill. men by Burnham, Ill. police, according to the Sikeston Public Safety Department.

The gun, a .22 caliber handgun, was among 43 stolen in the burglary at Homestead.

The two men, Ray Gene Farmer and Gary Eugene Topping, both 19, were stopped by Burnahm police because the tail light on Farmer's pickup truck was burned out.

Farmer reportedly gave the officers a difficult time, and when an officer approached the pickup truck, he found open liquor in the cab.

The officers than searched the pickup and found the gun under the driver's seat.

Burnham police told the Public Safety Department that both men said they found the gun and that "it wasn't the officer's business where." The two refused to say anything else about the gun.

Burnham is a small community near Chicago.

WARY OF SOCIALIZED HEALTH

There can be little doubt that Medicare, the federally operated health insurance program for the elderly and disabled, has been good for what ails people — especially people who happen to be members of the medical establishment.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare reports that 1,752 medical groups and clinics, 58 laboratories and 409 "solo practitioners" collected $100,000 or more in Medicare funds during 1975. Three solo practitioners were listed as having earned more than $300,000 each and 26 others more than $200,000.

Total Medicare payments to doctors and health care institutions came to $4.7 billion in the last fiscal year, more than a seven-fold increase over the $644 million paid out in 1965 when Medicare was initiated.

The department hastens to caution that those receiving large payments have not necessarily been milking Medicare although a program as large as this one has inevitably had its share of abuses.

Fortunately, Medicare seems to be better run than the companion $15 - billion Medicaid program, which a Senate committee last year found guilty of "abysmal" administration and widespread fraud.

Nor, of course, do the figures necessarily represent pure profit to the recipients. If their incomes are large, so are their expenses.

But the steady growth in both Medicare and Medicaid ought to prompt taxpayers to view proposals for comprehensive federal health insurance for all Americans with a high degree of skepticism. Experience shows that programs like these, no matter how modestly begun, have a way of taking on ever-expanding lives of their own.

National health insurance may be just what the social doctors order, but even the most cautious estimates of its potential cost and potential scope for waste make the programs we now have look like peanuts.

XXX

IT COSTS MORE TO BE POOR

The price of poverty has just gone up $350.

A typical nonfarm American family of four with an income of less than $5,580 a year is now considered poor, says the U.S. Labor Department. In 1976, the official poverty level was $5,500 for the same hypothetical family.

It also costs $241 more than it did last year for an urban family of four to maintain an "austere" standard of living. The department estimates the no-frills budget at slightly more than $10,000. Anything above that is sheer gravy — though don't tell that to the family earning $16,236, the new "moderate" standard of living income.

The reason, of course, is that old bugaboo called inflation, which like Alice in Wonderland, keeps us all running harder just to stay in the same place.

BIG LABOR STRIKING OUT

An article in the May-June Saturday Evening Post brought back some verv fond memories of one of the g eat philosophers of the game of baseball — the late Casey Stengel.

Never one to worry about names and particulars, Casey Stengel always could spare some time to talk with reporters about "that fella."

His analysis of one ballplayer, which the Post story repeated, is classic "Stengelese." "That fella runs splendid but he needs help at the plate, which coming from the country chasing rabbits all winter give him strong legs, although he broke one falling out of a tree which shows you can't tell, and when a curve ball comes he waves at it and if pitchers don't throw curves you have no pitching staff, so how is a manager going to know whether to tell boys to fall out of trees and break legs so he can run fast even if he can't hit a curve ball?"

Yes, like millions of other fans of the national sport, I'll miss Casey Stengel this summer. I'll miss his witticisms and garbled philosophy.

But the great tradition of speaking Stengelese will not be forgotten as long as AFL-CIO officials find it necessary to attack Right to Work and the alleged dangers involved in giving workers freedom of choice.

Some of the statements coming out of Big Labor's headquarters this spring probable would have had Casey scratching his head.

A good example is the statement — " Right to Work laws do ecomomic harm to the worker."

Now the AFL-CIO people read the same statistics as the rest of us. The U.S. Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics has just issued a report and breakdown on unemployment in the 50 states. Of the "best ten," those with the lowest unemployment rate, six are Right to Work states.

The national average for unemployment during 1976 was 7.7 per cent. Right to Work states averaged 6.1 per cent.

Approaching it from a differednt angle, a recent BLS report shows that Right to Work states gained 918,600 manufacturing jobs between 1965 and 1975, the last year for which statistics are available. The non-Right to Work states lost almost that many. Manufacturing jobs in the states without Right to Work laws decreased by 726,400.

How does Big Labor support its statement that "Right to Work laws do economic harm to the worker?" It's impossible to tell.

Now baseball is a game, and to hear Casey Stengel talking about players falling out of trees and chasing rabbits was both funny and endearing.

But the garbled mumblings of the AFL-CIO officials aren't funny nor are they endearing. These people are talking about forcing workers to join a union in order to earn a living and support their families.

We can't understand them because they don't want to be understood. And in this situation, the murkiness in speech is part of a deliberate deception. There can be nothing funny about that.

EYE CARE UNDER MEDICARE

Despite the fact that the medicare program has made a significant contribution to the health of our nation's aged since its inception 10 years ago, there are still a number of services for which the program fails to provide coverage. One of the most serious gaps is the lack of coverage for vision services for the elderly. For the most part, medicare currently excludes optometrists from the definition of recognized practitioners under the program and prohibits payments for eyeglasses and eye exams. The only exception is for prosthetic lenses furnished by optometrists following cataract surgery if the need for such lenses is certified to by the the attending physician.

Vision care represents the most glaring example of both the great need of our nation' elderly for medical appliances and the inadequacy of the existing pricing and delivery system for meeting that need. And, tragically enough, older Americans comprise the greatest bulk of the population needing vision care. At the present time, more than 20,000,000 Americans over 65, or 92 per cent of our nation's elderly require and own eyeglasses or contact lenses. Over 5,000,000 of these people need new corrective lenses, because the ones that they now have either do not help their sight oractually harm it. Countless addition elderly Americans need eyeglasses, but do not have them. This vast need for proper glasses is especially critical, because many eye diseases, such as glaucoma and senile cataracts, can lead to blindness if they are not detected and treated promptly. Since the rate of blindness a among Americans over 65 is 8.5 times as great as the number in the under- 65 population, it becomes more and more apparent that the crucial vision needs of the elderly are largely ignored.

The present delivery system for eyeglasses is full of pitfalls. The New York Department of Consumer Affairs conducted a survey, and fully one out of five eye examinations given to investigators resulted in unnecessary prescriptions for eyeglasses, and faulty prescriptions for glasses were dispensed in a number of other instances. What is an elderly person to do, with limited mobility and limited funds?

Moreover, the Subcommittee on Health and Long- Term Care of the Select Committee on Aging conducted a survey last Congress on costs of eyeglasses in the Washington area. The survey demonstrated a 230 per cent variance in the cost of identical eyeglasses with glass lense and an almost 200 variance in the cost of the identical eyeglasses with plastic lenses.

The situation can become desperate for an elderly person. I have introduced H.R. 2020 to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to include these crucial services. We must change medicare to be more responsible to our older Americans, to enable our elderly to live in dignity and security and as comfortably as possible.

New Piracy:

Security Chief warns of terrorist shifting from air hijacking to ship seizures

WASHINGTON — It isn't extra-sensory perception which is stimulating tension among anti-terrorist security specialists, these days directing the protection of harbors as well as airports.

There's an uneasy feeling now that the law of averages will bring a startling shift in terrorist tactics – swinging the international operatives such as the legendary killer "Carlos" to ships at sea. Or to the infiltration of vessels docked at free world waterfronts.

My good friend Eric Ellen, chief constable of the Port of London Authority police, warns that peaceful seaports are on "borrowed time." And Ellen as first vice president and secretary of the International Association of Airport and Seaport Police, cautions that "there has been a shift in the slant of terrorist activities from the acute, emotive situation produced in the air to the more sustained pressure that can be produced by other means."

Meaning that former aerial hijacking conspirators are planning to seize a ship on the high seas, or just before it leaves some port.

It adds up. Tough Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) security at American airports, for example, has averted five probable hijackings in the final six months of 1976.

There are authorities in the FAA's Eastern Region who set this figure much higher. They "presume" that any would-be passenger reaching the security checkpoints with firearms on his or her person intends to hijack the aircraft. That's the opinion of Eastern Region director William Morgan, whose territory covers eight major airports, including the New York-Newark-Metropolitan area as well as Philadelphia, Baltimore, National Airport, Dulles International and Pittsburgh.

Aside from the Croatians' seizure of an airplane, there hasn't been a successful hijack since 1972. But it does boggle the mind to learn from the national FAA headquarters here, headed by Administrator Langhorne Bond, that 3,936 firearms, most of them handguns, were seized at passenger security checkpoins during 1976.

Among the five suspected hijackers were a young woman who had a .22 revolver sewn into the pants leg of her slacks; a male with a nine-millimeter automatic pistol fastened with strips of cloth to his upper left side under jacket and shirt; another male with a .38-caliber revolver pasted under his shirt between the shoulder blades and a man with a 357 Magnum revolver hidden behind his belt.

They were stonewalled by security electronics. But they did manage to get into the airports. And perhaps they could have taken a section of one as hostage. So the FAA is considering asking Congress to make it a criminal offense even to carry a weapon into the airport itself.

It's making aircraft hijacking a tough and dangerous action, even for the romantic international terrorists, most of whom are young and love living as posh mercenaries for "the cause" betgween "exploits."

So Eric Ellen has warned his colleagues that there is a shift in tactics in the shifting terrorist winds.

"It is to the terrorist favoring this type of approach," Ellen reported to his people earlier this month, "that the ship must appeal. It gives him many advantages. By careful selection of the nationality of the ship, the destination of the cargo and the country in which the act is perpetrated (if the craft is seized inside a harbor -- VR), many combinations of international interest and counter-interest can be produced."

Ellen estimates the "value of a ship" to the terrorist "is greater than that of an aircraft."

"The damage and obstruction that a ship can cause," adds Ellen, "are greater than those which could be caused by an aircraft."

A seized airplane is too confining. The pressure too great. The tension and involvements of "friendly" governments too complex. The time too brief. But a ship at sea neutralizes most of this.

"In general terms the hijack of a ship would be a fairly complex operation," avers Ellen, "but, once accomplished, a ship could be a much easier place to hold than ... an aircraft full of passengers."

Why the security alert from London hasn't been taken more seriously is incomprehensible. Ellen points to the seizures of embassies and the capture of trains. Why then the lethargy on the water fronts and on the oceans?

Ellen's warning to the airport and harbor associations follows earlier cautioning by the London-based International Transportworkers Federation (ITF) which alerted its affiliated unions across the world some months ago. Difference is that Eric Ellen now is advising maritime police and security officials of an imminent change in terrorist tactics.

After the IFT flagged its hundreds of affiliated unions across the world, Longshoremen's president Teddy Gleason, seafarers and AFL-CIO maritime chief Paul Hall, and the National Maritime Union's leader Shannon Wall notified their own members. Thus there was coverage of American workers who load and take the freighter and tanker traffic out to sea. But now Eric Ellen is warning the harbor masters from whose docks sail the big passenger lines.

Piracy is romantic only in the annals of Jean Lafitte. It could be fatal if today's privateers go public.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

SOCIAL SECURITY CRISIS

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

While President Carter was in Europe, Vice President Mondale took on the unpleasant task of telling the American people the facts of life about Social Security. The system is running out of money.

For decades, the federal spenders have been concealing the fiscal unsoundness of Social Security, and trying to smear everyone who pointed out its defects or made constructive suggestions.

Now the day of reckoning is coming fast, and the politicians realize that they can't pay benefits in promises instead of cash.

The Carter administration proposal is to raise Social Security taxes much higher even than the increased rates that are already scheduled to go into effect. But that isn't enough. The Carter proposal also calls for a massive transfusion of $14 billion diverted from general revenues which are already swimming in red ink.

Most people erroneously believe that when Social Security taxes are deducted from their wages this money is set aside for their benefits after retirement. This is not true. Social Security is administered on a pay-out-as-we-take-in basis. All benefits to senior citizens are paid out of current taxes on younger workers.

When Social Security was set up, it was not structured on sound insurance and actuarial principles.

It was set up on the false assumption that there would always be many more workers paying into the system than retired people drawing benefits.

Social Security was thus made dependent on a high birthrate that constantly brings new workers into the system. When the American birthrate took a dramatic nose dive and life expectancy lengthened, the cash inflow could not keep pace with the cash outflow.

Back in 1940, there were 146 working contributors for every beneficiary. By 1947 this was reduced to 22 working contributors for every beneficiary. By 1957 this was reduced further to six. Now there are fewer than three working contributors for every one collecting benefits.

The percentage of people in the over-65 age group, especially with better medical care and longer life expectancy, will continue to increase.

It is easy to see that just around the corner we will reach a one-to-one ratio in Social Security; that is, every American who has a job will be paying the benefits of another person who doesn't.

The second defect in Social Security is the inherent inefficiency of bureaucracy annd government monopoly. No wonder Social Security taxes have gone up 10 times the cost of living, while benefits have risen less than one-third of the tax rise!

The third defect in Social Security is its basic inequity to younger workers. By the time today's younger worker is ready to retire, he will have paid into Social Security three times as much as a private insurance company would charge for the same kind of insurance and disability protection.

For 40 years, Social Security has been living in a privileged sanctuary, virtually immune from public criticism. Our democratic government, however, can function only if all government programs are subjected to the scrutiny of a prying press, a vigilant Congress and an alert public. This applies to Social Secirity as much as to any other federal agency.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Midshipmen's Exotic Phone Calls

by Jack Anderson
and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- The cheating scandal at West Point may be matched in military annals by a telephone scandal at Annapolis. For the lonely hearts at the Naval Academy have been running up telephone bills with calls to massage parlors and girl friends.

The telephone records also show a number of calls from the Annapolis naval establishment to gambling emporiums, race tracks, finance companies and stockbrokers. There have been political calls to such diverse organizations as the Daughters of the American Revolution, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Nazi party headquarters.

One call was traced to a bookie in Florida, others to health clubs and diet groups. Someone from the Academy, apparently suffering from an acute Big Mac attack, telephoned a McDonald's drive-in restaurant 3,000 miles away in Bellevue, Wash.

A private study of the telephone habits of the midshipmen and other naval employees at Annapolis show they spend a lot of time on the telephone. Many of them also charge their toll calls to the taxpayers. A study of only four per cent of the telephone records uncovered 660 long-distance calls at the taxpayers' expense during the first half of 1976.

The taxpayers are also paying for thousands of unnecessary toll calls that could be carried on the Navy tie lines to Baltimore and Washington. The limited study uncovered a waste of $11,000 on Baltimore-Washington toll calls.

But the most titillating were the sex calls. The study traced calls to eight different massage parlors, with such alluring names as Velvet Touch, Ethereal and King Arthur's Pleasure Shop.

Footnote: The study was done for the David Taylor Naval Ship Research and Development Center in Annapolis. But a cautious Navy spokesman told us that its conclusions "do not necessarily represent the views of the Navy or the commands involved in the study." The center is conducting a strict review of the phone calls, the spokesman said.

Cola Cronies: The cola influence has not subsided in the White House with the departure of the Republicans, who belonged to the Pepsi generation. Rather, Pepsi-Cola's Don Kendall has been replaced as a shadowy presence in the backrooms by Coca-Cola's J. Paul Austin.

Kendall helped to set up Richard Nixon in the law business in New York City in the 1960s. The grateful Nixon was soft on Pepsi, therefore, after he moved into the White House.

Austin, on the other hand, has been a sugar daddy to Jimmy Carter, whose political ambitions the Coca-Cola crowd has supported. It is only natural, therefore, that President Carter is soft on Coke.

This should have little effect, however, on the cola-drinking public. Both Pepsi-Cola and Coca-Cola are united on the sacred right of consumers to partake of their favorite beverage from throwaway containers.

The cola companies have prevailed over the Environmental Protection Agency, Council for Environmental Quality and Federal Energy Administration, which have sought to clean up the roadside litter by requiring deposits on beverage cans and bottles. This would also save the equivalent of 30 million barrels of oil each year, in the opinion of energy experts. This is the estimated amount of oil it takes to manufacture throwaway containers.

Kendall is given credit for blocking the throwaway reform during the Republican years. But President Carter's aides considered including the deposits-on-throwaways proposal in his energy message. Reliable sources claim Coca-Cola made a pitch to the White House against the idea. We could get no comment on this from the White House nor Coca-Cola. Our repeated calls to Austin were never returned.

As a matter of fact, the anti-throwaway proposal never made it into the president's energy message. A top White House official explained to us, with a shrug: "Maybe we just weren't brave enough. It may have caused more trouble than it was worth."

An environmental official tried to get the White House to adopt the proposal. "It was on the first laundry list," conceded a presidential aide. "But we punted on it." Another told us: "You would be amazed at the intensity of the lobbying."

Footnote: A Coca-Cola spokesman said the industry "favors a returnable bottle system that works." He contended that the consumers don't want to bother with returnable bottles and that the soft-drink industry is "consumer-oriented." He also disputed that abolishing throwaways would save much oil. It also takes oil, he argued, to wash and refill bottles after they are returned. As for litter, he said: "Newspapers cause more litter than anything else."

Who's News: A team of prominent Americans is secretly helping President Carter find a replacement for FBI director Clarence Kelley. The group has whittled down the list to 50 prospects, including judges, police chiefs, FBI officials and some academics. A final recommendation is still weeks away.

— House Republican leader John Rhodes has referred to Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill as a blustery, "partisan" politician. One newspaper, quoting Rhodes, labeled the Irish Catholic O'Neill as a highly "Protestant" rather than "partisan" politician. Rhodes rushed off a "Dear Tip" letter to the Speaker. "I hope I didn't cause you any problems with the (Catholic) Church," wrote Rhodes. "If you get ex-communicated, I'll try to get you in with the Moonies."

WARY OF SOCIALIZED HEALTH

There can be little doubt that Medicare, the federally operated health insurance program for the elderly and disabled, has been good for what ails people — especially people who happen to be members of the medical establishment.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare reports that 1,752 medical groups and clinics, 58 laboratories and 409 "solo practitioners" collected $100,000 or more in Medicare funds during 1975. Three solo practitioners were listed as having earned more than $300,000 each and 26 others more than $200,000.

Total Medicare payments to doctors and health care institutions came to $4.7 billion in the last fiscal year, more than a seven-fold increase over the $644 million paid out in 1965 when Medicare was initiated.

The department hastens to caution that those receiving large payments have not necessarily been milking Medicare although a program as large as this one has inevitably had its share of abuses.

Fortunately , Medicare seems to be better run than the companion $15 - billion Medicaid program, which a Senate committee last year found guilty of "abysmal" administration and widespread fraud.

Nor, of course, do the figures necessarily represent pure profit to the recipients. If their incomes are large, so are their expenses.

But the steady growth in both Medicare and Medicaid ought to prompt taxpayers to view proposals for comprehensive federal health insurance for all Americans with a high degree of skepticism. Experience shows that programs like these, no matter how modestly begun, have a way of taking on ever-expanding lives of their own.

National health insurance may be just what the social doctors order, but even the most cautious estimates of its potential cost and potential scope for waste make the programs we now have look like peanuts.

IT COSTS MORE TO BE POOR

The price of poverty has just gone up $350.

A typical nonfarm American family of four with an income of less than $5,580 a year is now considered poor, says the U.S. Labor Department. In 1976, the official poverty level was $5,500 for the same hypothetical family.

It also costs $241 more than it did last year for an urban family of four to maintain an "austere" standard of living. The department estimates the no-frills budget at slightly more than $10,000. Anything above that is sheer gravy — though don't tell that to the family earning $16,236, the new "moderate" standard of living income.

The reason, of course, is that old bugaboo called inflation, which like Alice in Wonderland, keeps us all running harder just to stay in the same place.

Moreover, the Subcommittee on Health and Long- Term Care of the Select Committee on Aging conducted a survey last Congress on costs of eyeglasses in the Washington area. The survey demonstrated a 230 per cent variance in the cost of identical eyeglasses with glass lense and an almost 200 variance in the cost of the identical eyeglasses with plastic lenses.

The situation can become desperate for an elderly person. I have introduced H.R. 2020 to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to include these crucial services. We must change medicare to be more responsible to our older Americans, to enable our elderly to live in dignity and security and as comfortably as possible.

New Piracy:

Security Chief warns of terrorist shifting from air hijacking to ship seizures

WASHINGTON — It isn't extra-sensory perception which is stimulating tension among anti-terrorist security specialists, these days directing the protection of harbors as well as airports.

There's an uneasy feeling now that the law of averages will bring a startling shift in terrorist tactics – swinging the international operatives such as the legendary killer "Carlos" to ships at sea. Or to the infiltration of vessels docked at free world waterfronts.

My good friend Eric Ellen, chief constable of the Port of London Authority police, warns that peaceful seaports are on "borrowed time." And Ellen as first vice president and secretary of the International Association of Airport and Seaport Police, cautions that "there has been a shift in the slant of terrorist activities from the acute, emotive situation produced in the air to the more sustained pressure that can be produced by other means."

Meaning that former aerial hijacking conspirators are planning to seize a ship on the high seas, or just before it leaves some port.

It adds up. Tough Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) security at American airports, for example, has averted five probable hijackings in the final six months of 1976.

There are authorities in the FAA's Eastern Region who set this figure much higher. They "presume" that any would-be passenger reaching the security checkpoints with firearms on his or her person intends to hijack the aircraft. That's the opinion of Eastern Region director William Morgan, whose territory covers eight major airports, including the New York-Newark-Metropolitan area as well as Philadelphia, Baltimore, National Airport, Dulles International and Pittsburgh.

Aside from the Croatians' seizure of an airplane, there hasn't been a successful hijack since 1972. But it does boggle the mind to learn from the national FAA headquarters here, headed by Administrator Langhorne Bond, that 3,936 firearms, most of them handguns, were seized at passenger security checkpoins during 1976.

Among the five suspected hijackers were a young woman who had a .22 revolver sewn into the pants leg of her slacks; a male with a nine-millimeter automatic pistol fastened with strips of cloth to his upper left side under jacket and shirt; another male with a .38-caliber revolver pasted under his shirt between the shoulder blades and a man with a 357 Magnum revolver hidden behind his belt.

They were stonewalled by security electronics. But they did manage to get into the airports. And perhaps they could have taken a section of one as hostage. So the FAA is considering asking Congress to make it a criminal offense even to carry a weapon into the airport itself.

It's making aircraft hijacking a tough and dangerous action, even for the romantic international terrorists, most of whom are young and love living as posh mercenaries for "the cause" betgween "exploits."

So Eric Ellen has warned his colleagues that there is a shift in tactics in the shifting terrorist winds.

"It is to the terrorist favoring this type of approach," Ellen reported to his people earlier this month, "that the ship must appeal. It gives him many advantages. By careful selection of the nationality of the ship, the destination of the cargo and the country in which the act is perpetrated (if the craft is seized inside a harbor -- VR), many combinations of international interest and counter-interest can be produced."

Ellen estimates the "value of a ship" to the terrorist "is greater than that of an aircraft."

"The damage and obstruction that a ship can cause," adds Ellen, "are greater than those which could be caused by an aircraft."

A seized airplane is too confining. The pressure too great. The tension and involvements of "friendly" governments too complex. The time too brief. But a ship at sea neutralizes most of this.

"In general terms the hijack of a ship would be a fairly complex operation," avers Ellen, "but, once accomplished, a ship could be a much easier place to hold than ... an aircraft full of passengers."

Why the security alert from London hasn't been taken more seriously is incomprehensible. Ellen points to the seizures of embassies and the capture of trains. Why then the lethargy on the water fronts and on the oceans?

Ellen's warning to the airport and harbor associations follows earlier cautioning by the London-based International Transportworkers Federation (ITF) which alerted its affiliated unions across the world some months ago. Difference is that Eric Ellen now is advising maritime police and security officials of an imminent change in terrorist tactics.

After the IFT flagged its hundreds of affiliated unions across the world, Longshoremen's president Teddy Gleason, seafarers and AFL-CIO maritime chief Paul Hall, and the National Maritime Union's leader Shannon Wall notified their own members. Thus there was coverage of American workers who load and take the freighter and tanker traffic out to sea. But now Eric Ellen is warning the harbor masters from whose docks sail the big passenger lines.

Piracy is romantic only in the annals of Jean Lafitte. It could be fatal if today's privateers go public.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

SOCIAL SECURITY CRISIS

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

While President Carter was in Europe, Vice President Mondale took on the unpleasant task of telling the American people the facts of life about Social Security. The system is running out of money.

For decades, the federal spenders have been concealing the fiscal unsoundness of Social Security, and trying to smear everyone who pointed out its defects or made constructive suggestions.

Now the day of reckoning is coming fast, and the politicians realize that they can't pay benefits in promises instead of cash.

The Carter administration proposal is to raise Social Security taxes much higher even than the increased rates that are already scheduled to go into effect. But that isn't enough. The Carter proposal also calls for a massive transfusion of $14 billion diverted from general revenues which are already swimming in red ink.

Most people erroneously believe that when Social Security taxes are deducted from their wages this money is set aside for their benefits after retirement. This is not true. Social Security is administered on a pay-out-as-we-take-in basis. All benefits to senior citizens are paid out of current taxes on younger workers.

When Social Security was set up, it was not structured on sound insurance and actuarial principles.

It was set up on the false assumption that there would always be many more workers paying into the system than retired people drawing benefits.

Social Security was thus made dependent on a high birthrate that constantly brings new workers into the system. When the American birthrate took a dramatic nose dive and life expectancy lengthened, the cash inflow could not keep pace with the cash outflow.

Back in 1940, there were 146 working contributors for every beneficiary. By 1947 this was reduced to 22 working contributors for every beneficiary. By 1957 this was reduced further to six. Now there are fewer than three working contributors for every one collecting benefits.

The percentage of people in the over-65 age group, especially with better medical care and longer life expectancy, will continue to increase.

It is easy to see that just around the corner we will reach a one-to-one ratio in Social Security; that is, every American who has a job will be paying the benefits of another person who doesn't.

The second defect in Social Security is the inherent inefficiency of bureaucracy annd government monopoly. No wonder Social Security taxes have gone up 10 times the cost of living, while benefits have risen less than one-third of the tax rise!

The third defect in Social Security is its basic inequity to younger workers. By the time today's younger worker is ready to retire, he will have paid into Social Security three times as much as a private insurance company would charge for the same kind of insurance and disability protection.

For 40 years, Social Security has been living in a privileged sanctuary, virtually immune from public criticism. Our democratic government, however, can function only if all government programs are subjected to the scrutiny of a prying press, a vigilant Congress and an alert public. This applies to Social Secirity as much as to any other federal agency.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Midshipmen's Exotic Phone Calls

by Jack Anderson
and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- The cheating scandal at West Point may be matched in military annals by a telephone scandal at Annapolis. For the lonely hearts at the Naval Academy have been running up telephone bills with calls to massage parlors and girl friends.

The telephone records also show a number of calls from the Annapolis naval establishment to gambling emporiums, race tracks, finance companies and stockbrokers. There have been political calls to such diverse organizations as the Daughters of the American Revolution, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Nazi party headquarters.

One call was traced to a bookie in Florida, others to health clubs and diet groups. Someone from the Academy, apparently suffering from an acute Big Mac attack, telephoned a McDonald's drive-in restaurant 3,000 miles away in Bellevue, Wash.

A private study of the telephone habits of the midshipmen and other naval employees at Annapolis show they spend a lot of time on the telephone. Many of them also charge their toll calls to the taxpayers. A study of only four per cent of the telephone records uncovered 660 long-distance calls at the taxpayers' expense during the first half of 1976.

The taxpayers are also paying for thousands of unnecessary toll calls that could be carried on the Navy tie lines to Baltimore and Washington. The limited study uncovered a waste of $11,000 on Baltimore-Washington toll calls.

But the most titillating were the sex calls. The study traced calls to eight different massage parlors, with such alluring names as Velvet Touch, Ethereal and King Arthur's Pleasure Shop.

Footnote: The study was done for the David Taylor Naval Ship Research and Development Center in Annapolis. But a cautious Navy spokesman told us that its conclusions "do not necessarily represent the views of the Navy or the commands involved in the study." The center is conducting a strict review of the phone calls, the spokesman said.

Cola Cronies: The cola influence has not subsided in the White House with the departure of the Republicans, who belonged to the Pepsi generation. Rather, Pepsi-Cola's Don Kendall has been replaced as a shadowy presence in the backrooms by Coca-Cola's J. Paul Austin.

Kendall helped to set up Richard Nixon in the law business in New York City in the 1960s. The grateful Nixon was soft on Pepsi, therefore, after he moved into the White House.

Austin, on the other hand, has been a sugar daddy to Jimmy Carter, whose political ambitions the Coca-Cola crowd has supported. It is only natural, therefore, that President Carter is soft on Coke.

This should have little effect, however, on the cola-drinking public. Both Pepsi-Cola and Coca-Cola are united on the sacred right of consumers to partake of their favorite beverage from throwaway containers.

The cola companies have prevailed over the Environmental Protection Agency, Council for Environmental Quality and Federal Energy Administration, which have sought to clean up the roadside litter by requiring deposits on beverage cans and bottles. This would also save the equivalent of 30 million barrels of oil each year, in the opinion of energy experts. This is the estimated amount of oil it takes to manufacture throwaway containers.

Kendall is given credit for blocking the throwaway reform during the Republican years. But President Carter's aides considered including the deposits-on-throwaways proposal in his energy message. Reliable sources claim Coca-Cola made a pitch to the White House against the idea. We could get no comment on this from the White House nor Coca-Cola. Our repeated calls to Austin were never returned.

As a matter of fact, the anti-throwaway proposal never made it into the president's energy message. A top White House official explained to us, with a shrug: "Maybe we just weren't brave enough. It may have caused more trouble than it was worth."

An environmental official tried to get the White House to adopt the proposal. "It was on the first laundry list," conceded a presidential aide. "But we punted on it." Another told us: "You would be amazed at the intensity of the lobbying."

Footnote: A Coca-Cola spokesman said the industry "favors a returnable bottle system that works." He contended that the consumers don't want to bother with returnable bottles and that the soft-drink industry is "consumer-oriented." He also disputed that abolishing throwaways would save much oil. It also takes oil, he argued, to wash and refill bottles after they are returned. As for litter, he said: "Newspapers cause more litter than anything else."

Who's News: A team of prominent Americans is secretly helping President Carter find a replacement for FBI director Clarence Kelley. The group has whittled down the list to 50 prospects, including judges, police chiefs, FBI officials and some academics. A final recommendation is still weeks away.

— House Republican leader John Rhodes has referred to Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill as a blustery, "partisan" politician. One newspaper, quoting Rhodes, labeled the Irish Catholic O'Neill as a highly "Protestant" rather than "partisan" politician. Rhodes rushed off a "Dear Tip" letter to the Speaker. "I hope I didn't cause you any problems with the (Catholic) Church," wrote Rhodes. "If you get ex-communicated, I'll try to get you in with the Moonies."

Today's news in brief

Talks breakthrough reported

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — A breakthrough is reported in the nuclear arms talks between Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, and a compromise formula has been referred to Moscow. U.S. and Soviet negotiators indicated they should know today or Saturday whether the two superpowers are going to be able to agree on their second treaty — SALT II — to limit or reduce their arsenals of long-range nuclear weapons.

Conservative wins in Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Late returns from the Israeli election give Menahem Begin's conservative Likud bloc and its potential coalition partners enough votes for a small but effective majority in the 120-member Knesset, Israel's parliament, election committee sources said today. The unofficial count of civilian ballots from Tuesday's election gave Likud 43 seats in the 120-member parliament while the religious and right-wing partners that are expected to support it had 19 seats. This would give the coalition a total of 62 and a majority of four.

Carter not bound by Nixon agreement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The congressman who disclosed former president Richard M. Nixon's secret agreement to give up to $5 billion in U.S. aid to North Vietnam says the promise is not binding on the current administration. Rep. Lester L. Wolff, D+N.Y., said the agreement is "an historical document, null and void." His opinion is shared by Nixon, and more importantly, by President Carter, who has said he does not feel bound by any of Nixon's commitments.

FDA saccharin ban still on

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government will look at keeping saccharin-sweetened diet soft drinks on the market for diabetics, but admits the chances are slim. FDA commissioner Donald Kennedy clearly was impressed by the parade of diabetics, parents of diabetics and doctors who told two days of hearings that ended Thursday of the plight of diabetics under the FDA's saccharin ban, which will take effect in July.

Army general recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — On orders from a displeased President Carter, the third-ranking U.S. Army general in Korea is flying here for a face-to-face White House confrontation triggered by his public criticism of Carter's plan to withdraw American ground forces from South Korea. At issue is Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub lead to war."

Gen. Hershey dies

ANGOLA, Ind. (AP) — Gen. Lewis Blaine Hershey, who supervised the draft of 14.5 million Americans in three wars before retiring as the oldest military man on active duty, died today in his hometown of Angola in northeastern Indiana. He was 83.

Hershey died in his sleep at a motel where he had spent the night, Steuben County Sheriff Paul Gordon said. He was to have attended graduation exercises Saturday at his alma mater, Tri+State University, where a memorial to him is being created.

Gordon said Hershey was found in bed about 7:15 a.m. EST by his son, Col. Gilbert Hershey, who was staying in the same room. Hershey died sometime after 4 a.m., the sheriff said.

Gordon said the body was being flown to Ft. Benjamin Harrison at Indianapolis, where an autopsy was scheduled at the son's request to determine cause of death. The body then will be flown to Washington for funeral services at Bethesda, Md., and burial at Arlington National Cemetery.

Ky blames Watergate for Vietnam fall

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former South Vietnam Prime Minister Nguyen Cao Ky blames Watergate for his nation's fall, saying that a strong Richard Nixon would never have let South Vietnam collapse. Ky, now operating a liquor store-delicatessen in suburban Norwalk, viewed former President Nixon's televised interview with David Frost Thursday night and said, "I don't want to blame Mr. Nixon."

Today's news in brief

Talks breakthrough reported

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — A breakthrough is reported in the nuclear arms talks between Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, and a compromise formula has been referred to Moscow. U.S. and Soviet negotiators indicated they should know today or Saturday whether the two superpowers are going to be able to agree on their second treaty — SALT II — to limit or reduce their arsenals of long-range nuclear weapons.

Conservative wins in Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Late returns from the Israeli election give Menahem Begin's conservative Likud bloc and its potential coalition partners enough votes for a small but effective majority in the 120-member Knesset, Israel's parliament, election committee sources said today. The unofficial count of civilian ballots from Tuesday's election gave Likud 43 seats in the 120-member parliament while the religious and right-wing partners that are expected to support it had 19 seats. This would give the coalition a total of 62 and a majority of four.

Carter not bound by Nixon agreement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The congressman who disclosed former president Richard M. Nixon's secret agreement to give up to $5 billion in U.S. aid to North Vietnam says the promise is not binding on the current administration. Rep. Lester L. Wolff, D+N.Y., said the agreement is "an historical document, null and void." His opinion is shared by Nixon, and more importantly, by President Carter, who has said he does not feel bound by any of Nixon's commitments.

Gen. Hershey dies

ANGOLA, Ind. (AP) — Gen. Lewis Blaine Hershey, who supervised the draft of 14.5 million Americans in three wars before retiring as the oldest military man on active duty, died today in his hometown of Angola in northeastern Indiana. He was 83.

Hershey died in his sleep at a motel where he had spent the night, Steuben County Sheriff Paul Gordon said. He was to have attended graduation exercises Saturday at his alma mater, Tri+State University, where a memorial to him is being created.

Gordon said Hershey was found in bed about 7:15 a.m. EST by his son, Col. Gilbert Hershey, who was staying in the same room. Hershey died sometime after 4 a.m., the sheriff said.

Gordon said the body was being flown to Ft. Benjamin Harrison at Indianapolis, where an autopsy was scheduled at the son's request to determine cause of death. The body then will be flown to Washington for funeral services at Bethesda, Md., and burial at Arlington National Cemetery.

Ky blames Watergate for Vietnam fall

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former South Vietnam Prime Minister Nguyen Cao Ky blames Watergate for his nation's fall, saying that a strong Richard Nixon would never have let South Vietnam collapse. Ky, now operating a liquor store-delicatessen in suburban Norwalk, viewed former President Nixon's televised interview with David Frost Thursday night and said, "I don't want to blame Mr. Nixon."

WARY OF SOCIALIZED HEALTH

There can be little doubt that Medicare, the federally operated health insurance program for the elderly and disabled, has been good for what ails people — especially people who happen to be members of the medical establishment.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare reports that 1,752 medical groups and clinics, 58 laboratories and 409 "solo practitioners" collected $100,000 or more in Medicare funds during 1975. Three solo practitioners were listed as having earned more than $300,000 each and 26 others more than $200,000.

Total Medicare payments to doctors and health care institutions came to $4.7 billion in the last fiscal year, more than a seven-fold increase over the $644 million paid out in 1965 when Medicare was initiated.

The department hastens to caution that those receiving large payments have not necessarily been milking Medicare although a program as large as this one has inevitably had its share of abuses.

Fortunately, Medicare seems to be better run than the companion $15 - billion Medicaid program, which a Senate committee last year found guilty of "abysmal" administration and widespread fraud.

Nor, of course, do the figures necessarily represent pure profit to the recipients. If their incomes are large, so are their expenses.

But the steady growth in both Medicare and Medicaid ought to prompt taxpayers to view proposals for comprehensive federal health insurance for all Americans with a high degree of skepticism. Experience shows that programs like these, no matter how modestly begun, have a way of taking on ever-expanding lives of their own.

National health insurance may be just what the social doctors order, but even the most cautious estimates of its potential cost and potential scope for waste make the programs we now have look like peanuts.

IT COSTS MORE TO BE POOR

The price of poverty has just gone up $350.

A typical nonfarm American family of four with an income of less than $5,580 a year is now considered poor, says the U.S. Labor Department. In 1976, the official poverty level was $5,500 for the same hypothetical family.

It also costs $241 more than it did last year for an urban family of four to maintain an "austere" standard of living. The department estimates the no-frills budget at slightly more than $10,000. Anything above that is sheer gravy — though don't tell that to the family earning $16,236, the new "moderate" standard of living income.

The reason, of course, is that old bugaboo called inflation, which like Alice in Wonderland, keeps us all running harder just to stay in the same place.

BIG LABOR STRIKING OUT

An article in the May-June Saturday Evening Post brought back some verv fond memories of one of the g eat philosophers of the game of baseball — the late Casey Stengel.

Never one to worry about names and particulars, Casey Stengel always could spare some time to talk with reporters about "that fella."

His analysis of one ballplayer, which the Post story repeated, is classic "Stengelese." "That fella runs splendid but he needs help at the plate, which coming from the country chasing rabbits all winter give him strong legs, although he broke one falling out of a tree which shows you can't tell, and when a curve ball comes he waves at it and if pitchers don't throw curves you have no pitching staff, so how is a manager going to know whether to tell boys to fall out of trees and break legs so he can run fast even if he can't hit a curve ball?"

Yes, like millions of other fans of the national sport, I'll miss Casey Stengel this summer. I'll miss his witticisms and garbled philosophy.

But the great tradition of speaking Stengelese will not be forgotten as long as AFL-CIO officials find it necessary to attack Right to Work and the alleged dangers involved in giving workers freedom of choice.

Some of the statements coming out of Big Labor's headquarters this spring probable would have had Casey scratching his head.

A good example is the statement — " Right to Work laws do ecomomic harm to the worker."

Now the AFL-CIO people read the same statistics as the rest of us. The U.S. Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics has just issued a report and breakdown on unemployment in the 50 states. Of the "best ten," those with the lowest unemployment rate, six are Right to Work states.

The national average for unemployment during 1976 was 7.7 per cent. Right to Work states averaged 6.1 per cent.

Approaching it from a differednt angle, a recent BLS report shows that Right to Work states gained 918,600 manufacturing jobs between 1965 and 1975, the last year for which statistics are available. The non-Right to Work states lost almost that many. Manufacturing jobs in the states without Right to Work laws decreased by 726,400.

How does Big Labor support its statement that "Right to Work laws do economic harm to the worker?" It's impossible to tell.

Now baseball is a game, and to hear Casey Stengel talking about players falling out of trees and chasing rabbits was both funny and endearing.

But the garbled mumblings of the AFL-CIO officials aren't funny nor are they endearing. These people are talking about forcing workers to join a union in order to earn a living and support their families.

We can't understand them because they don't want to be understood. And in this situation, the murkiness in speech is part of a deliberate deception. There can be nothing funny about that.

EYE CARE UNDER MEDICARE

Despite the fact that the medicare program has made a significant contribution to the health of our nation's aged since its inception 10 years ago, there are still a number of services for which the program fails to provide coverage. One of the most serious gaps is the lack of coverage for vision services for the elderly. For the most part, medicare currently excludes optometrists from the definition of recognized practitioners under the program and prohibits payments for eyeglasses and eye exams. The only exception is for prosthetic lenses furnished by optometrists following cataract surgery if the need for such lenses is certified to by the the attending physician.

Vision care represents the most glaring example of both the great need of our nation' elderly for medical appliances and the inadequacy of the existing pricing and delivery system for meeting that need. And, tragically enough, older Americans comprise the greatest bulk of the population needing vision care. At the present time, more than 20,000,000 Americans over 65, or 92 per cent of our nation's elderly require and own eyeglasses or contact lenses. Over 5,000,000 of these people need new corrective lenses, because the ones that they now have either do not help their sight oractually harm it. Countless addition elderly Americans need eyeglasses, but do not have them. This vast need for proper glasses is especially critical, because many eye diseases, such as glaucoma and senile cataracts, can lead to blindness if they are not detected and treated promptly. Since the rate of blindness a among Americans over 65 is 8.5 times as great as the number in the under- 65 population, it becomes more and more apparent that the crucial vision needs of the elderly are largely ignored.

The present delivery system for eyeglasses is full of pitfalls. The New York Department of Consumer Affairs conducted a survey, and fully one out of five eye examinations given to investigators resulted in unnecessary prescriptions for eyeglasses, and faulty prescriptions for glasses were dispensed in a number of other instances. What is an elderly person to do, with limited mobility and limited funds?

Moreover, the Subcommittee on Health and Long- Term Care of the Select Committee on Aging conducted a survey last Congress on costs of eyeglasses in the Washington area. The survey demonstrated a 230 per cent variance in the cost of identical eyeglasses with glass lense and an almost 200 variance in the cost of the identical eyeglasses with plastic lenses.

The situation can become desperate for an elderly person. I have introduced H.R. 2020 to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to include these crucial services. We must change medicare to be more responsible to our older Americans, to enable our elderly to live in dignity and security and as comfortably as possible.

New Piracy:

Security Chief warns of terrorist shifting from air hijacking to ship seizures

WASHINGTON — It isn't extra-sensory perception which is stimulating tension among anti-terrorist security specialists, these days directing the protection of harbors as well as airports.

There's an uneasy feeling now that the law of averages will bring a startling shift in terrorist tactics – swinging the international operatives such as the legendary killer "Carlos" to ships at sea. Or to the infiltration of vessels docked at free world waterfronts.

My good friend Eric Ellen, chief constable of the Port of London Authority police, warns that peaceful seaports are on "borrowed time." And Ellen as first vice president and secretary of the International Association of Airport and Seaport Police, cautions that "there has been a shift in the slant of terrorist activities from the acute, emotive situation produced in the air to the more sustained pressure that can be produced by other means."

Meaning that former aerial hijacking conspirators are planning to seize a ship on the high seas, or just before it leaves some port.

It adds up. Tough Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) security at American airports, for example, has averted five probable hijackings in the final six months of 1976.

There are authorities in the FAA's Eastern Region who set this figure much higher. They "presume" that any would-be passenger reaching the security checkpoints with firearms on his or her person intends to hijack the aircraft. That's the opinion of Eastern Region director William Morgan, whose territory covers eight major airports, including the New York-Newark-Metropolitan area as well as Philadelphia, Baltimore, National Airport, Dulles International and Pittsburgh.

Aside from the Croatians' seizure of an airplane, there hasn't been a successful hijack since 1972. But it does boggle the mind to learn from the national FAA headquarters here, headed by Administrator Langhorne Bond, that 3,936 firearms, most of them handguns, were seized at passenger security checkpoins during 1976.

Among the five suspected hijackers were a young woman who had a .22 revolver sewn into the pants leg of her slacks; a male with a nine-millimeter automatic pistol fastened with strips of cloth to his upper left side under jacket and shirt; another male with a .38-caliber revolver pasted under his shirt between the shoulder blades and a man with a 357 Magnum revolver hidden behind his belt.

They were stonewalled by security electronics. But they did manage to get into the airports. And perhaps they could have taken a section of one as hostage. So the FAA is considering asking Congress to make it a criminal offense even to carry a weapon into the airport itself.

It's making aircraft hijacking a tough and dangerous action, even for the romantic international terrorists, most of whom are young and love living as posh mercenaries for "the cause" betgween "exploits."

So Eric Ellen has warned his colleagues that there is a shift in tactics in the shifting terrorist winds.

"It is to the terrorist favoring this type of approach," Ellen reported to his people earlier this month, "that the ship must appeal. It gives him many advantages. By careful selection of the nationality of the ship, the destination of the cargo and the country in which the act is perpetrated (if the craft is seized inside a harbor -- VR), many combinations of international interest and counter-interest can be produced."

Ellen estimates the "value of a ship" to the terrorist "is greater than that of an aircraft."

"The damage and obstruction that a ship can cause," adds Ellen, "are greater than those which could be caused by an aircraft."

A seized airplane is too confining. The pressure too great. The tension and involvements of "friendly" governments too complex. The time too brief. But a ship at sea neutralizes most of this.

"In general terms the hijack of a ship would be a fairly complex operation," avers Ellen, "but, once accomplished, a ship could be a much easier place to hold than ... an aircraft full of passengers."

Why the security alert from London hasn't been taken more seriously is incomprehensible. Ellen points to the seizures of embassies and the capture of trains. Why then the lethargy on the water fronts and on the oceans?

Ellen's warning to the airport and harbor associations follows earlier cautioning by the London-based International Transportworkers Federation (ITF) which alerted its affiliated unions across the world some months ago. Difference is that Eric Ellen now is advising maritime police and security officials of an imminent change in terrorist tactics.

After the IFT flagged its hundreds of affiliated unions across the world, Longshoremen's president Teddy Gleason, seafarers and AFL-CIO maritime chief Paul Hall, and the National Maritime Union's leader Shannon Wall notified their own members. Thus there was coverage of American workers who load and take the freighter and tanker traffic out to sea. But now Eric Ellen is warning the harbor masters from whose docks sail the big passenger lines.

Piracy is romantic only in the annals of Jean Lafitte. It could be fatal if today's privateers go public.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

SOCIAL SECURITY CRISIS

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

While President Carter was in Europe, Vice President Mondale took on the unpleasant task of telling the American people the facts of life about Social Security. The system is running out of money.

For decades, the federal spenders have been concealing the fiscal unsoundness of Social Security, and trying to smear everyone who pointed out its defects or made constructive suggestions.

Now the day of reckoning is coming fast, and the politicians realize that they can't pay benefits in promises instead of cash.

The Carter administration proposal is to raise Social Security taxes much higher even than the increased rates that are already scheduled to go into effect. But that isn't enough. The Carter proposal also calls for a massive transfusion of $14 billion diverted from general revenues which are already swimming in red ink.

Most people erroneously believe that when Social Security taxes are deducted from their wages this money is set aside for their benefits after retirement. This is not true. Social Security is administered on a pay-out-as-we-take-in basis.

All benefits to senior citizens are paid out of current taxes on younger workers.

When Social Security was set up, it was not structured on sound insurance and actuarial principles.

It was set up on the false assumption that there would always be many more workers paying into the system than retired people drawing benefits.

Social Security was thus made dependent on a high birthrate that constantly brings new workers into the system. When the American birthrate took a dramatic nose dive and life expectancy lengthened, the cash inflow could not keep pace with the cash outflow.

Back in 1940, there were 146 working contributors for every beneficiary. By 1947 this was reduced to 22 working contributors for every beneficiary. By 1957 this was reduced further to six. Now there are fewer than three working contributors for every one collecting benefits.

The percentage of people in the over-65 age group, especially with better medical care and longer life expectancy, will continue to increase.

It is easy to see that just around the corner we will reach a one-to-one ratio in Social Security; that is, every American who has a job will be paying the benefits of another person who doesn't.

The second defect in Social Security is the inherent inefficiency of bureaucracy annd government monopoly. No wonder Social Security taxes have gone up 10 times the cost of living, while benefits have risen less than one-third of the tax rise!

The third defect in Social Security is its basic inequity to younger workers. By the time today's younger worker is ready to retire, he will have paid into Social Security three times as much as a private insurance company would charge for the same kind of insurance and disability protection.

For 40 years, Social Security has been living in a privileged sanctuary, virtually immune from public criticism. Our democratic government, however, can function only if all government programs are subjected to the scrutiny of a prying press, a vigilant Congress and an alert public. This applies to Social Secirity as much as to any other federal agency.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Midshipmen's Exotic Phone Calls

by Jack Anderson
and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- The cheating scandal at West Point may be matched in military annals by a telephone scandal at Annapolis. For the lonely hearts at the Naval Academy have been running up telephone bills with calls to massage parlors and girl friends.

The telephone records also show a number of calls from the Annapolis naval establishment to gambling emporiums, race tracks, finance companies and stockbrokers. There have been political calls to such diverse organizations as the Daughters of the American Revolution, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Nazi party headquarters.

One call was traced to a bookie in Florida, others to health clubs and diet groups. Someone from the Academy, apparently suffering from an acute Big Mac attack, telephoned a McDonald's drive-in restaurant 3,000 miles away in Bellevue, Wash.

A private study of the telephone habits of the midshipmen and other naval employees at Annapolis show they spend a lot of time on the telephone. Many of them also charge their toll calls to the taxpayers. A study of only four per cent of the telephone records uncovered 660 long-distance calls at the taxpayers expense during the first half of 1976.

The taxpayers are also paying for thousands of unnecessary toll calls that could be carried on the Navy tie lines to Baltimore and Washington. The limited study uncovered a waste of $11,000 on Baltimore-Washington toll calls.

But the most titillating were the sex calls. The study traced calls to eight different massage parlors, with such alluring names as Velvet Touch, Ethereal and King Arthur's Pleasure Shop.

Footnote: The study was done for the David Taylor Naval Ship Research and Development Center in Annapolis. But a cautious Navy spokesman told us that its conclusions "do not necessarily represent the views of the Navy or the commands involved in the study." The center is conducting a strict review of the phone calls, the spokesman said.

Cola Cronies: The cola influence has not subsided in the White House with the departure of the Republicans, who belonged to the Pepsi generation. Rather, Pepsi-Cola's Don Kendall has been replaced as a shadowy presence in the backrooms by Coca-Cola's J. Paul Austin.

Kendall helped to set up Richard Nixon in the law business in New York City in the 1960s. The grateful Nixon was soft on Pepsi, therefore, after he moved into the White House.

Austin, on the other hand, has been a sugar daddy to Jimmy Carter, whose political ambitions the Coca-Cola crowd has supported. It is only natural, therefore, that President Carter is soft on Coke.

This should have little effect, however, on the cola-drinking public. Both Pepsi-Cola and Coca-Cola are united on the sacred right of consumers to partake of their favorite beverage from throwaway containers.

The cola companies have prevailed over the Environmental Protection Agency, Council for Environmental Quality and Federal Energy Administration, which have sought to clean up the roadside litter by requiring deposits on beverage cans and bottles. This would also save the equivalent of 30 million barrels of oil each year, in the opinion of energy experts. This is the estimated amount of oil it takes to manufacture throwaway containers.

Kendall is given credit for blocking the throwaway reform during the Republican years. But President Carter's aides considered including the deposits-on-throwaways proposal in his energy message. Reliable sources claim Coca-Cola made a pitch to the White House against the idea. We could get no comment on this from the White House nor Coca-Cola. Our repeated calls to Austin were never returned.

As a matter of fact, the anti-throwaway proposal never made it into the president's energy message. A top White House official explained to us, with a shrug: "Maybe we just weren't brave enough. It may have caused more trouble than it was worth."

An environmental official tried to get the White House to adopt the proposal. "It was on the first laundry list," conceded a presidential aide. "But we punted on it." Another told us: "You would be amazed at the intensity of the lobbying."

Footnote: A Coca-Cola spokesman said the industry "favors a returnable bottle system that works." He contended that the consumers don't want to bother with returnable bottles and that the soft-drink industry is "consumer-oriented." He also disputed that abolishing throwaways would save much oil. It also takes oil, he argued, to wash and refill bottles after they are returned. As for litter, he said: "Newspapers cause more litter than anything else."

Who's News: A team of prominent Americans is secretly helping President Carter find a replacement for FBI director Clarence Kelley. The group has whittled down the list to 50 prospects, including judges, police chiefs, FBI officials and some academics. A final recommendation is still weeks away.

— House Republican leader John Rhodes has referred to Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill as a blustery, "partisan" politician. One newspaper, quoting Rhodes, labeled the Irish Catholic O'Neill as a highly "Protestant" rather than "partisan" politician. Rhodes rushed off a "Dear Tip" letter to the Speaker. "I hope I didn't cause you any problems with the (Catholic) Church," wrote Rhodes. "If you get ex-communicated, I'll try to get you in with the Moonies."

BIG LABOR STRIKING OUT

An article in the May-June Saturday Evening Post brought back some verv fond memories of one of the g eat philosophers of the game of baseball — the late Casey Stengel.

Never one to worry about names and particulars, Casey Stengel always could spare some time to talk with reporters about "that fella."

His analysis of one ballplayer, which the Post story repeated, is classic "Stengelese." "That fella runs splendid but he needs help at the plate, which coming from the country chasing rabbits all winter give him strong legs, although he broke one falling out of a tree which shows you can't tell, and when a curve ball comes he waves at it and if pitchers don't throw curves you have no pitching staff, so how is a manager going to know whether to tell boys to fall out of trees and break legs so he can run fast even if he can't hit a curve ball?"

Yes, like millions of other fans of the national sport, I'll miss Casey Stengel this summer. I'll miss his witticisms and garbled philosophy.

But the great tradition of speaking Stengelese will not be forgotten as long as AFL-CIO officials find it necessary to attack Right to Work and the alleged dangers involved in giving workers freedom of choice.

Some of the statements coming out of Big Labor's headquarters this spring probable would have had Casey scratching his head.

A good example is the statement — " Right to Work laws do ecomomic harm to the worker."

Now the AFL-CIO people read the same statistics as the rest of us. The U.S. Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics has just issued a report and breakdown on unemployment in the 50 states. Of the "best ten," those with the lowest unemployment rate, six are Right to Work states.

The national average for unemployment during 1976 was 7.7 per cent. Right to Work states averaged 6.1 per cent.

Approaching it from a differednt angle, a recent BLS report shows that Right to Work states gained 918,600 manufacturing jobs between 1965 and 1975, the last year for which statistics are available. The non-Right to Work states lost almost that many. Manufacturing jobs in the states without Right to Work laws decreased by 726,400.

How does Big Labor support its statement that "Right to Work laws do economic harm to the worker?" It's impossible to tell.

Now baseball is a game, and to hear Casey Stengel talking about players falling out of trees and chasing rabbits was both funny and endearing.

But the garbled mumblings of the AFL-CIO officials aren't funny nor are they endearing. These people are talking about forcing workers to join a union in order to earn a living and support their families.

We can't understand them because they don't want to be understood. And in this situation, the murkiness in speech is part of a deliberate deception. There can be nothing funny about that.

EYE CARE UNDER MEDICARE

Despite the fact that the medicare program has made a significant contribution to the health of our nation's aged since its inception 10 years ago, there are still a number of services for which the program fails to provide coverage. One of the most serious gaps is the lack of coverage for vision services for the elderly. For the most part, medicare currently excludes optometrists from the definition of recognized practitioners under the program and prohibits payments for eyeglasses and eye exams. The only exception is for prosthetic lenses furnished by optometrists following cataract surgery if the need for such lenses is certified to by the the attending physician.

Vision care represents the most glaring example of both the great need of our nation' elderly for medical appliances and the inadequacy of the existing pricing and delivery system for meeting that need. And, tragically enough, older Americans comprise the greatest bulk of the population needing vision care. At the present time, more than 20,000,000 Americans over 65, or 92 per cent of our nation's elderly require and own eyeglasses or contact lenses. Over 5,000,000 of these people need new corrective lenses, because the ones that they now have either do not help their sight oractually harm it. Countless addition elderly Americans need eyeglasses, but do not have them. This vast need for proper glasses is especially critical, because many eye diseases, such as glaucoma and senile cataracts, can lead to blindness if they are not detected and treated promptly. Since the rate of blindness a among Americans over 65 is 8.5 times as great as the number in the under- 65 population, it becomes more and more apparent that the crucial vision needs of the elderly are largely ignored.

The present delivery system for eyeglasses is full of pitfalls. The New York Department of Consumer Affairs conducted a survey, and fully one out of five eye examinations given to investigators resulted in unnecessary prescriptions for eyeglasses, and faulty prescriptions for glasses were dispensed in a number of other instances. What is an elderly person to do, with limited mobility and limited funds?

Moreover, the Subcommittee on Health and Long- Term Care of the Select Committee on Aging conducted a survey last Congress on costs of eyeglasses in the Washington area. The survey demonstrated a 230 per cent variance in the cost of identical eyeglasses with glass lense and an almost 200 variance in the cost of the identical eyeglasses with plastic lenses.

The situation can become desperate for an elderly person. I have introduced H.R. 2020 to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to include these crucial services. We must change medicare to be more responsible to our older Americans, to enable our elderly to live in dignity and security and as comfortably as possible.

New Piracy:

Security Chief warns of terrorist shifting from air hijacking to ship seizures

WASHINGTON — It isn't extra-sensory perception which is stimulating tension among anti-terrorist security specialists, these days directing the protection of harbors as well as airports.

There's an uneasy feeling now that the law of averages will bring a startling shift in terrorist tactics – swinging the international operatives such as the legendary killer "Carlos" to ships at sea. Or to the infiltration of vessels docked at free world waterfronts.

My good friend Eric Ellen, chief constable of the Port of London Authority police, warns that peaceful seaports are on "borrowed time." And Ellen as first vice president and secretary of the International Association of Airport and Seaport Police, cautions that "there has been a shift in the slant of terrorist activities from the acute, emotive situation produced in the air to the more sustained pressure that can be produced by other means."

Meaning that former aerial hijacking conspirators are planning to seize a ship on the high seas, or just before it leaves some port.

It adds up. Tough Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) security at American airports, for example, has averted five probable hijackings in the final six months of 1976.

There are authorities in the FAA's Eastern Region who set this figure much higher. They "presume" that any would-be passenger reaching the security checkpoints with firearms on his or her person intends to hijack the aircraft. That's the opinion of Eastern Region director William Morgan, whose territory covers eight major airports, including the New York-Newark-Metropolitan area as well as Philadelphia, Baltimore, National Airport, Dulles International and Pittsburgh.

Aside from the Croatians' seizure of an airplane, there hasn't been a successful hijack since 1972. But it does boggle the mind to learn from the national FAA headquarters here, headed by Administrator Langhorne Bond, that 3,936 firearms, most of them handguns, were seized at passenger security checkpoins during 1976.

Among the five suspected hijackers were a young woman who had a .22 revolver sewn into the pants leg of her slacks; a male with a nine-millimeter automatic pistol fastened with strips of cloth to his upper left side under jacket and shirt; another male with a .38-caliber revolver pasted under his shirt between the shoulder blades and a man with a 357 Magnum revolver hidden behind his belt.

They were stonewalled by security electronics. But they did manage to get into the airports. And perhaps they could have taken a section of one as hostage. So the FAA is considering asking Congress to make it a criminal offense even to carry a weapon into the airport itself.

It's making aircraft hijacking a tough and dangerous action, even for the romantic international terrorists, most of whom are young and love living as posh mercenaries for "the cause" betgween "exploits."

So Eric Ellen has warned his colleagues that there is a shift in tactics in the shifting terrorist winds.

"It is to the terrorist favoring this type of approach," Ellen reported to his people earlier this month, "that the ship must appeal. It gives him many advantages. By careful selection of the nationality of the ship, the destination of the cargo and the country in which the act is perpetrated (if the craft is seized inside a harbor -- VR), many combinations of international interest and counter-interest can be produced."

Ellen estimates the "value of a ship" to the terrorist "is greater than that of an aircraft."

"The damage and obstruction that a ship can cause," adds Ellen, "are greater than those which could be caused by an aircraft."

A seized airplane is too confining. The pressure too great. The tension and involvements of "friendly" governments too complex. The time too brief. But a ship at sea neutralizes most of this.

"In general terms the hijack of a ship would be a fairly complex operation," avers Ellen, "but, once accomplished, a ship could be a much easier place to hold than ... an aircraft full of passengers."

Why the security alert from London hasn't been taken more seriously is incomprehensible. Ellen points to the seizures of embassies and the capture of trains. Why then the lethargy on the water fronts and on the oceans?

Ellen's warning to the airport and harbor associations follows earlier cautioning by the London-based International Transportworkers Federation (ITF) which alerted its affiliated unions across the world some months ago. Difference is that Eric Ellen now is advising maritime police and security officials of an imminent change in terrorist tactics.

After the IFT flagged its hundreds of affiliated unions across the world, Longshoremen's president Teddy Gleason, seafarers and AFL-CIO maritime chief Paul Hall, and the National Maritime Union's leader Shannon Wall notified their own members. Thus there was coverage of American workers who load and take the freighter and tanker traffic out to sea. But now Eric Ellen is warning the harbor masters from whose docks sail the big passenger lines.

Piracy is romantic only in the annals of Jean Lafitte. It could be fatal if today's privateers go public.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

SOCIAL SECURITY CRISIS

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

While President Carter was in Europe, Vice President Mondale took on the unpleasant task of telling the American people the facts of life about Social Security. The system is running out of money.

For decades, the federal spenders have been concealing the fiscal unsoundness of Social Security, and trying to smear everyone who pointed out its defects or made constructive suggestions.

Now the day of reckoning is coming fast, and the politicians realize that they can't pay benefits in promises instead of cash.

The Carter administration proposal is to raise Social Security taxes much higher even than the increased rates that are already scheduled to go into effect. But that isn't enough. The Carter proposal also calls for a massive transfusion of $14 billion diverted from general revenues which are already swimming in red ink.

Most people erroneously believe that when Social Security taxes are deducted from their wages this money is set aside for their benefits after retirement. This is not true. Social Security is administered on a pay-out-as-we-take-in basis.

All benefits to senior citizens are paid out of current taxes on younger workers.

When Social Security was set up, it was not structured on sound insurance and actuarial principles.

It was set up on the false assumption that there would always be many more workers paying into the system than retired people drawing benefits.

Social Security was thus made dependent on a high birthrate that constantly brings new workers into the system. When the American birthrate took a dramatic nose dive and life expectancy lengthened, the cash inflow could not keep pace with the cash outflow.

Back in 1940, there were 146 working contributors for every beneficiary. By 1947 this was reduced to 22 working contributors for every beneficiary. By 1957 this was reduced further to six. Now there are fewer than three working contributors for every one collecting benefits.

The percentage of people in the over-65 age group, especially with better medical care and longer life expectancy, will continue to increase.

It is easy to see that just around the corner we will reach a one-to-one ratio in Social Security; that is, every American who has a job will be paying the benefits of another person who doesn't.

The second defect in Social Security is the inherent inefficiency of bureaucracy annd government monopoly. No wonder Social Security taxes have gone up 10 times the cost of living, while benefits have risen less than one-third of the tax rise!

The third defect in Social Security is its basic inequity to younger workers. By the time today's younger worker is ready to retire, he will have paid into Social Security three times as much as a private insurance company would charge for the same kind of insurance and disability protection.

For 40 years, Social Security has been living in a privileged sanctuary, virtually immune from public criticism. Our democratic government, however, can function only if all government programs are subjected to the scrutiny of a prying press, a vigilant Congress and an alert public. This applies to Social Secirity as much as to any other federal agency.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Midshipmen's Exotic Phone Calls

by Jack Anderson
and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- The cheating scandal at West Point may be matched in military annals by a telephone scandal at Annapolis. For the lonely hearts at the Naval Academy have been running up telephone bills with calls to massage parlors and girl friends.

The telephone records also show a number of calls from the Annapolis naval establishment to gambling emporiums, race tracks, finance companies and stockbrokers. There have been political calls to such diverse organizations as the Daughters of the American Revolution, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Nazi party headquarters.

One call was traced to a bookie in Florida, others to health clubs and diet groups. Someone from the Academy, apparently suffering from an acute Big Mac attack, telephoned a McDonald's drive-in restaurant 3,000 miles away in Bellevue, Wash.

A private study of the telephone habits of the midshipmen and other naval employees at Annapolis show they spend a lot of time on the telephone. Many of them also charge their toll calls to the taxpayers. A study of only four per cent of the telephone records uncovered 660 long-distance calls at the taxpayers expense during the first half of 1976.

The taxpayers are also paying for thousands of unnecessary toll calls that could be carried on the Navy tie lines to Baltimore and Washington. The limited study uncovered a waste of $11,000 on Baltimore-Washington toll calls.

But the most titillating were the sex calls. The study traced calls to eight different massage parlors, with such alluring names as Velvet Touch, Ethereal and King Arthur's Pleasure Shop.

Footnote: The study was done for the David Taylor Naval Ship Research and Development Center in Annapolis. But a cautious Navy spokesman told us that its conclusions "do not necessarily represent the views of the Navy or the commands involved in the study." The center is conducting a strict review of the phone calls, the spokesman said.

Cola Cronies: The cola influence has not subsided in the White House with the departure of the Republicans, who belonged to the Pepsi generation. Rather, Pepsi-Cola's Don Kendall has been replaced as a shadowy presence in the backrooms by Coca-Cola's J. Paul Austin.

Kendall helped to set up Richard Nixon in the law business in New York City in the 1960s. The grateful Nixon was soft on Pepsi, therefore, after he moved into the White House.

Austin, on the other hand, has been a sugar daddy to Jimmy Carter, whose political ambitions the Coca-Cola crowd has supported. It is only natural, therefore, that President Carter is soft on Coke.

This should have little effect, however, on the cola-drinking public. Both Pepsi-Cola and Coca-Cola are united on the sacred right of consumers to partake of their favorite beverage from throwaway containers.

The cola companies have prevailed over the Environmental Protection Agency, Council for Environmental Quality and Federal Energy Administration, which have sought to clean up the roadside litter by requiring deposits on beverage cans and bottles. This would also save the equivalent of 30 million barrels of oil each year, in the opinion of energy experts. This is the estimated amount of oil it takes to manufacture throwaway containers.

Kendall is given credit for blocking the throwaway reform during the Republican years. But President Carter's aides considered including the deposits-on-throwaways proposal in his energy message. Reliable sources claim Coca-Cola made a pitch to the White House against the idea. We could get no comment on this from the White House nor Coca-Cola. Our repeated calls to Austin were never returned.

As a matter of fact, the anti-throwaway proposal never made it into the president's energy message. A top White House official explained to us, with a shrug: "Maybe we just weren't brave enough. It may have caused more trouble than it was worth."

An environmental official tried to get the White House to adopt the proposal. "It was on the first laundry list," conceded a presidential aide. "But we punted on it." Another told us: "You would be amazed at the intensity of the lobbying."

Footnote: A Coca-Cola spokesman said the industry "favors a returnable bottle system that works." He contended that the consumers don't want to bother with returnable bottles and that the soft-drink industry is "consumer-oriented." He also disputed that abolishing throwaways would save much oil. It also takes oil, he argued, to wash and refill bottles after they are returned. As for litter, he said: "Newspapers cause more litter than anything else."

Who's News: A team of prominent Americans is secretly helping President Carter find a replacement for FBI director Clarence Kelley. The group has whittled down the list to 50 prospects, including judges, police chiefs, FBI officials and some academics. A final recommendation is still weeks away.

— House Republican leader John Rhodes has referred to Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill as a blustery, "partisan" politician. One newspaper, quoting Rhodes, labeled the Irish Catholic O'Neill as a highly "Protestant" rather than "partisan" politician. Rhodes rushed off a "Dear Tip" letter to the Speaker. "I hope I didn't cause you any problems with the (Catholic) Church," wrote Rhodes. "If you get ex-communicated, I'll try to get you in with the Moonies."

Today's news in brief

Talks breakthrough reported

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — A breakthrough is reported in the nuclear arms talks between Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, and a compromise formula has been referred to Moscow. U.S. and Soviet negotiators indicated they should know today or Saturday whether the two superpowers are going to be able to agree on their second treaty — SALT II — to limit or reduce their arsenals of long-range nuclear weapons.

Conservative wins in Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Late returns from the Israeli election give Menahem Begin's conservative Likud bloc and its potential coalition partners enough votes for a small but effective majority in the 120-member Knesset, Israel's parliament, election committee sources said today. The unofficial count of civilian ballots from Tuesday's election gave Likud 43 seats in the 120-member parliament while the religious and right-wing partners that are expected to support it had 19 seats. This would give the coalition a total of 62 and a majority of four.

Carter not bound by Nixon agreement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The congressman who disclosed former president Richard M. Nixon's secret agreement to give up to $5 billion in U.S. aid to North Vietnam says the promise is not binding on the current administration. Rep. Lester L. Wolff, D+N.Y., said the agreement is "an historical document, null and void." His opinion is shared by Nixon, and more importantly, by President Carter, who has said he does not feel bound by any of Nixon's commitments.

FDA saccharin ban still on

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government will look at keeping saccharin-sweetened diet soft drinks on the market for diabetics, but admits the chances are slim. FDA commissioner Donald Kennedy clearly was impressed by the parade of diabetics, parents of diabetics and doctors who told two days of hearings that ended Thursday of the plight of diabetics under the FDA's saccharin ban, which will take effect in July.

Army general recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — On orders from a displeased President Carter, the third-ranking U.S. Army general in Korea is flying here for a face-to-face White House confrontation triggered by his public criticism of Carter's plan to withdraw American ground forces from South Korea. At issue is Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub lead to war."

Gen. Hershey dies

ANGOLA, Ind. (AP) — Gen. Lewis Blaine Hershey, who supervised the draft of 14.5 million Americans in three wars before retiring as the oldest military man on active duty, died today in his hometown of Angola in northeastern Indiana. He was 83.

Hershey died in his sleep at a motel where he had spent the night, Steuben County Sheriff Paul Gordon said. He was to have attended graduation exercises Saturday at his alma mater, Tri+State University, where a memorial to him is being created.

Gordon said Hershey was found in bed about 7:15 a.m. EST by his son, Col. Gilbert Hershey, who was staying in the same room. Hershey died sometime after 4 a.m., the sheriff said.

Gordon said the body was being flown to Ft. Benjamin Harrison at Indianapolis, where an autopsy was scheduled at the son's request to determine cause of death. The body then will be flown to Washington for funeral services at Bethesda, Md., and burial at Arlington National Cemetery.

Ky blames Watergate for Vietnam fall

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former South Vietnam Prime Minister Nguyen Cao Ky blames Watergate for his nation's fall, saying that a strong Richard Nixon would never have let South Vietnam collapse. Ky, now operating a liquor store-delicatessen in suburban Norwalk, viewed former President Nixon's televised interview with David Frost Thursday night and said, "I don't want to blame Mr. Nixon."

Today's news in brief

Talks breakthrough reported

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — A breakthrough is reported in the nuclear arms talks between Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, and a compromise formula has been referred to Moscow. U.S. and Soviet negotiators indicated they should know today or Saturday whether the two superpowers are going to be able to agree on their second treaty — SALT II — to limit or reduce their arsenals of long-range nuclear weapons.

Conservative wins in Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Late returns from the Israeli election give Menahem Begin's conservative Likud bloc and its potential coalition partners enough votes for a small but effective majority in the 120-member Knesset, Israel's parliament, election committee sources said today. The unofficial count of civilian ballots from Tuesday's election gave Likud 43 seats in the 120-member parliament while the religious and right-wing partners that are expected to support it had 19 seats. This would give the coalition a total of 62 and a majority of four.

Carter not bound by Nixon agreement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The congressman who disclosed former president Richard M. Nixon's secret agreement to give up to $5 billion in U.S. aid to North Vietnam says the promise is not binding on the current administration. Rep. Lester L. Wolff, D+N.Y., said the agreement is "an historical document, null and void." His opinion is shared by Nixon, and more importantly, by President Carter, who has said he does not feel bound by any of Nixon's commitments.

FDA saccharin ban still on

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government will look at keeping saccharin-sweetened diet soft drinks on the market for diabetics, but admits the chances are slim. FDA commissioner Donald Kennedy clearly was impressed by the parade of diabetics, parents of diabetics and doctors who told two days of hearings that ended Thursday of the plight of diabetics under the FDA's saccharin ban, which will take effect in July.

Army general recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — On orders from a displeased President Carter, the third-ranking U.S. Army general in Korea is flying here for a face-to-face White House confrontation triggered by his public criticism of Carter's plan to withdraw American ground forces from South Korea. At issue is Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub lead to war."

Gen. Hershey dies

ANGOLA, Ind. (AP) — Gen. Lewis Blaine Hershey, who supervised the draft of 14.5 million Americans in three wars before retiring as the oldest military man on active duty, died today in his hometown of Angola in northeastern Indiana. He was 83.

Hershey died in his sleep at a motel where he had spent the night, Steuben County Sheriff Paul Gordon said. He was to have attended graduation exercises Saturday at his alma mater, Tri+State University, where a memorial to him is being created.

Gordon said Hershey was found in bed about 7:15 a.m. EST by his son, Col. Gilbert Hershey, who was staying in the same room. Hershey died sometime after 4 a.m., the sheriff said.

Gordon said the body was being flown to Ft. Benjamin Harrison at Indianapolis, where an autopsy was scheduled at the son's request to determine cause of death. The body then will be flown to Washington for funeral services at Bethesda, Md., and burial at Arlington National Cemetery.

Ky blames Watergate for Vietnam fall

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former South Vietnam Prime Minister Nguyen Cao Ky blames Watergate for his nation's fall, saying that a strong Richard Nixon would never have let South Vietnam collapse. Ky, now operating a liquor store-delicatessen in suburban Norwalk, viewed former President Nixon's televised interview with David Frost Thursday night and said, "I don't want to blame Mr. Nixon."

Beth Welborn will present challenge to area Girl Scouts

DEXTER— Elizabeth Dell Welborn, Bloomfield, will address members of the 1977 Class of First Class Girl Scouts Sunday at 3 p.m. at the Dexter High School Auditorium. Miss Welborn, who has been an active Girl Scout most of her life, will challenge the class to meet the demand of the present day society by putting to use the training they have received in Scouting.

In 1967, Beth Welborn was selected as Region VIII Good Will Ambassador to England under the Wider Opportunity Program and is a recipient of both the First Class and God and Community awards.

Reba Kay Carlyle

She is a graduate of Briarcliff College in Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., where she served as a troop leader.

Miss Welborn is a member of the Board of Directors and public relations chairman for the Cotton Boll Girl Scout Council and Tri-County Counseling Center, Regional Chairman of the Juvenile Delinquency Program and Secretary for the Stoddard County Improvement Committee.

She was instrumental in establishing the Bloomfield Child Care Center and is an active Girl Scout and Boy Scout troop leader.

CIC honors former presidents

LILBOURN — At the May meeting, the Lilbourn Civic Improvement Club honored 16 former presidents. Each past club leader recalled for the group some interesting highlights of her term in office. Some of the accounts given were of the activities of the club during the flood of 1937, the building of the Lilbourn Memorial Library, several moves of the club's kitchen and the many, many dinners cooked and served to the Kiwanis Club. Nancy Campbell introduced the honorees and presented each with a corsage.

Attending for this special occasion were: Roberta Green, Deering, Opal Tarbert, Sikeston, Novella Martin, New Madrid, Lucille Rubottom and Lessie Snellings of Lilbourn. Former club presidents who are still active club members in attendance were: Myrtle Simpson, Grace Ponder, Ellenora Giddens, Madalyn Mitchem, Myrtle Ice, Betty Joyce Dambach, Frances Ponder, Joy Jones, Dorothy Stark, Dolly Beavers and the current president, Margaret Corse.

A walnut and bronze plaque engraved with the names of the club's presidents was dedicated and placed in the City Hall.

Teresa Treadwell, who represented the club on the Sophomore Pilgrimage to Jefferson City, gave a report on her trip. She enjoyed the experience and thanked the club for giving her the opportunity to attend. President Margaret Corse also made the trip and she added some interesting details to Teresa's report.

Other guests were Emma Treadwell and Caroline McWilliams of Lilbourn, Betty Calhoun of Deering and Doris McClellan of Sikeston.

The installation of officers will be held June 13 at the City Hall.

Dear Ann Landers

The 'other woman' is off base over death

Dear Ann: Earl divorced his wife to marry me, making me "The Other Women." As a case in point I'll describe the latest incident, since it is a classic example of how I've been treated by my husband, his kids, his relatives and his friends.

Earl's ex-wife died yesterday after a long illness. He was notified at work by his ex-in-laws. I was informed this morning that he is taking his children to the funeral which is all right with me. (Incidentally, they live with us.)

Old friends have been calling our home all day to express their sympathies to Earl. He is accepting condolences in funereal tones, as though he were the bereaved mate. So here I sit, feeling like a nameless, faceless nobody. As a result of countless daily insults of this type, I have become a depressed, nagging witch who feels "off base." — Am I?

Dear O.B.: Yes, you are. That woman was the mother of his children. Old friends undoubtedly still think of them as a couple.

Cool it, Kiddo, or you'll lose the whole ballgame.

Dear Ann: Do you know anything about a device that attaches to the mouthpiece of the telephone and cuts off the sound from your end of the line when you don't want the party to hear what you are saying?

It works like this: If you want to say to your husband, "I'll get off as soon as your long-winded sister winds down" -- or yell to one of the kids, "Please tell me that the paperboy is at the door and I have to pay him so I can get away from this bore" -- you simply press the lever on the side of the attachment and the person on the other end of the line can't hear you.

Sounds good, doesn't it? But — I've been told the telephone company doesn't want people to put gadgets on their phones. What's more, if they catch you doing it, they can remove the instrument.

How come the phone company can do this when it is not illegal to manufacture the gadgets? -- Jus' Wunderin'

Dear Jus': Most telephones belong to the phone companies. The rules vary on what can be hooked onto or into the instrument. You'll have to check out this particular attachment with your local company to learn whether or not it's okay with them.

Speaking for myself, I wouldn't dare fool around with a gadget like the one you describe. If it didn't work you'd be in plenty big trouble.

Dear Ann Landers: I resent being invited to a person's home and THEN being told I can't smoke.

The last time whis happened I just got up and left. Now they say I'M rude. I say THEY are.

If you don't want me to smoke in your house, that's OK. Tell me in advance and I'll say "No thanks" and stay home. If there's something about you I can't tolerate, I won't invite you to my house a second time. — Call Me Ruth

Dear Ruth: What's your beef? People who don't want smoke in their homes have a right to say so. If you don't like the house rules, stay home and smoke to your heart's content.

Anyone who walks out on a hostess because she is told she can't smoke has a bigger problem than manners.

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers's booklet, "Marriage -- What to Expect," will prepare you for better or for worse. Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Class A Regional opens today

LEADWOOD — The Chaffee Red Devils, favorites to capture first place in this weekend's Class A Regional Tournament at Leadwood, would like one more shot at the Lilbourn Panthers.

Chaffee and Lilbourn, if they win their opening round games as expected today, will meet tomorrow afternoon for the right to move to the State Class A Tournament at Lebanon.

It was the Panthers who spoiled Chaffee's bid for a second consecutive Class A championship last year, knocking off the Red Devils at the Regional level in a big upset. Lilbourn went on to place second in the state tournament.

Lilbourn takes on Leadwood today in the opener of the four-team tournament, bring together the champions of Districts 9, 10, 11 and 12 of Class A. That game begins at 1:30, followed by a matchup between Chaffee and Twin Rivers at 3:30.

The key personnel that brought Chaffee the state flag in 1975 were sophomores then, and they are still around as seniors for another shot at "the big one."

Pitching and defense are the strength of the Red Devils squad. Big Scott Wachter led the staff in victories at 7-2 and sported a fine 1.82 earned run average. Lindy Duncan was undefeated at 4-0 and had an even more impressive 1.37 ERA. Both are seniors.

"We have two pitchers who are as good or better than anyone we've seen all year," said Mike Payne about his big two, Wachter and Duncan. Also available for mound service are capable junior Mickey Eftink and Kevin McGuire.

Wachter will start on the mound today for Chaffee against Twin Rivers, Payne said.

But the Red Devils are not without some offensive punch of their own. Lindy Duncan, regarded by most as the best shortstop in the area (when he's not pitching), pounded out a school record 33 hits while batting .410. Wachter, who plays center field when he's not on the mound, batted .415.

Another feather in the Chaffee cap is the return behind the place of Don Kiefer. Kiefer has been the regular catcher for three years, but tenonitis in his throwing shoulder have sidelined him most of this season. But Payne says that the hard- hitting receiver should be ready to go this weekend.

Chaffee defeated Twin Rivers earlier this season, prompting Payne to worry that his boys might be looking past the Royals to Lilbourn. "I hope they don't get the big head," said Payne.

For Lilbourn, the strong suit is hitting. The Panthers sport a team batting average of .298 and have some impressive hitting statistics individually.

Bobby Reno tops the Panthers in average with .377, and has five home runs. Dale Chamberlain is batting .358, Mike Roberts sports a .351 figure and James Berry is hitting at .340. Roberts clouted nine home runs this season.

But the Lilbourn pitching is suspect, and coach Ted Mauk agrees. "We used 44 different pitchers in 19 games," said Mauk, who has no real stopper on his staff.

Going for Lilbourn today will be sophomore Tracy Tope. "We've played lousy behind him," said Mauk about his team's defensive support. Tope is 2-2 and has a good 2.15 ERA. 'But every time he pitches, we mess up in the field."

Should Lilbourn win today, Reno will come back in the championship game. Reno is 4-0 and owns a 3.36 ERA. Twin Rivers is led by hurlers Mike Breckenridge and Guy Nelson, who led the Royals to the District championship in District 10. Not much is known about Leadwood except that their lineup is expected to be depleted by a senior trip that will have most of the starters out of action.

The Leadwood team is coached by former Sikestonian Bobby Blankenship.

Time Out

The sports fans of America may have been subjected to the biggest snow job since Evel Knievel's jump over the Snake River Canyon Monday night.

Heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali, making his return to the ring after his almost annual retirement, clowned and stalled his way to a 15-round decision over Alfredo Evangelista of Spain in Landover, Maryland.

Ali earned over $2 million for his half-hearted effort (or lack of it). The feeling that the champ hardly deserved his paycheck was as unanimous as was the decision of the three judges.

It was well-known that Ali, aging performer that he is, has seen his best fighting days. He is over the hill. His much- disputed victory over Ken Norton allowed him to retain his title, but told the world that he was coming to the end of the line.

Ali vowed after the Norton fight that he was retiring, this time for sure. "I promise you that I will never fight again," he told reporters, who may have said under their breath, "I'll believe it when I see it."

And now financial trouble apparently is the motive for the return to the ring of Muhammad Ali Despite the millions he has made in the fight game, his much-publicized martial troubles have depleted his fortune.

But although he is past his prime, the name of Muhammad Ali is enough to fill any boxing arena. Even against an unheralded challenger, such as Alfredo Evangelista, his fight drew considerable attention. After all, Ali has always had the reputation of staging a good show, even if the fight wasn't.

But he let them down Monday night.

It is a sad spectacle to watch a man who is probably the greatest boxer to ever live let down the fans who ultimately pay his salary like he did against Evangelista. Those who showed up at the Capital Center and those who watched on national television didn't expect to see the same Ali who beat Foreman and Frazier. But neither did they expect to see a man who would do only what he had to to win, stalling his way through the 15-rounder and picking up his $2 million, with the boos still ringing in his ears.

And in the post- fight interview with Howard Cosell, Ali seemed more concerned with boasting of his dancing prowess and with plugging his upcoming motion picture than he did with trying to explain his poor effort.

It is interesting to note that every heavyweight champion but one in recent history has lost his title by knockout. Muhammad Ali, by refusing to quit while he's still ahead, will probably join them soon.

MANKATO, Minn. (AP)—Nebraska-Omaha and Missouri-St. Louis, the only unbeaten teams of the National Collegiate Athletic Association regional baseball tournament at Mankato, were to meet late today in the double-elimination competition.

Nebraska-Omaha eliminated host Mankato 3-2, Missouri-St. Louis tripped Southwest Missouri State 7-4 and Southeast Missouri State ousted South Dakota State 6-5 in games Thursday.

A pair of teams with a loss apiece in the tournament, Southwest Missouri and Southeast Missouri, were to meet before Nebraska-Omaha and Missouri-St. Louis square off today.

The winner of the first game will meet the loser of the second in the third contest of the day.

Class A Regional opens today

LEADWOOD — The Chaffee Red Devils, favorites to capture first place in this weekend's Class A Regional Tournament at Leadwood, would like one more shot at the Lilbourn Panthers.

Chaffee and Lilbourn, if they win their opening round games as expected today, will meet tomorrow afternoon for the right to move to the State Class A Tournament at Lebanon.

It was the Panthers who spoiled Chaffee's bid for a second consecutive Class A championship last year, knocking off the Red Devils at the Regional level in a big upset. Lilbourn went on to place second in the state tournament.

Lilbourn takes on Leadwood today in the opener of the four-team tournament, bring together the champions of Districts 9, 10, 11 and 12 of Class A. That game begins at 1:30, followed by a matchup between Chaffee and Twin Rivers at 3:30.

The key personnel that brought Chaffee the state flag in 1975 were sophomores then, and they are still around as seniors for another shot at "the big one."

Pitching and defense are the strength of the Red Devils squad. Big Scott Wachter led the staff in victories at 7-2 and sported a fine 1.82 earned run average. Lindy Duncan was undefeated at 4-0 and had an even more impressive 1.37 ERA. Both are seniors.

Run Dusty Run could be sleeper in Preakness

BALTIMORE (AP) — Trainer Smiley Adams can't pull another major Preakness surprise Saturday, but there are indications his entry is again being overlooked.

Two years ago, Adams saddled Master Derby to victory in the second race of the Triple Crown series, with the son of Dust Commander going off at 23-1 despite having finished out of the money only twice in 20 starts.

Now Adams is back at Pimlico Race Course with Run Dusty Run, another Dust Commander colt who has finished worse than second just once in 15 career starts but is listed at only 8-1 in the early odds.

Bell City & Bloomfield are BWSL winners

Bell City is the only remaining undefeated team in the Bootheel Womens Softball League after last night's action at Farris Field.

Bell City rapped out 13 hits against Bernie in the battle between the tournament's two remaining teams in the winners bracket as they took a 16-8 decision. The winners scored five times in the first and four in the second in support of Rampley, who earned the victory.

In the loser's bracket, Bloomfield came on strong in the final three innings to down the Sikeston Bombers 11-9. Bloomfield scored three runs in each of the final three innings to overhaul the Bombers, who had won two straight in the losers braket. Ann Williams homered with one on in the fifth to highlight the Bloomfield comeback. Sikeston scored three in the bottom of the sixth and had the winning run at the plate before the rally was killed.

Tonight, Bloomfield meets Bernie at 7:30, with the winner earning the right to take on Bell City in Saturday night's finals. The first game gets underway at 7:00, and if Bell City loses, a second game will be necessary immediately following.

Nissalke is NBA's Coach of the Year

HOUSTON (AP) — Tom Nissalke celebrated his wife's birthday Thursday, took his driving test to get a Texas driver's license and topped it off by being named National Basketball Association coach of the year.

Nissalke, 42, already had driven the surprising Houston Rockets to the NBA's Central Division championship and to the Eastern Conference finals with the fourth best record in the NBA.

After covering all that hazardous territory without an accident, the driver's test should have been a breeze.

"Coaches in general get too much credit when they win and too much flak when they lose," said Nissalke, who turned the Rockets from a 40-42 record to a 49-33 champion. "This is the biggest personal honor that has ever come to me and it's a reflection of the job the team did."

Nissalke beat out Los Angeles Coach Jerry West by a first-place vote margin of 26-21 and became the second pro coach to win coach of the year honors in both the NBA and American Basketball Association.

Former Utah Stars and Los Angeles Lakers Coach Bill Sharman also was a dual winner. Nissalke won ABA coach of the year honors after the 1971-72 season at Dallas.

Nissalke took charge of the floundering Rockets prior to last season and immediately started wheeling and dealing. He traded Joe Meriweather and Gus Bailey to Atlanta in exchange for the No. 1 choice in the 1976 NBA draft.

That selection was used to take Maryland All-American John Lucas, who became an almost instant starter and quarterback of Houston's controlled-tempo offense.

Nissalke then gave the Rockets' No. 1 draft choices for 1977 and 1978 to Buffalo for 6-foot-11 Moses Malone, who blossomed into one of the most feared rebounders in the NBA.

Run Dusty Run could be sleeper in Preakness

BALTIMORE (AP) — Trainer Smiley Adams can't pull another major Preakness surprise Saturday, but there are indications his entry is again being overlooked.

Two years ago, Adams saddled Master Derby to victory in the second race of the Triple Crown series, with the son of Dust Commander going off at 23-1 despite having finished out of the money only twice in 20 starts.

Now Adams is back at Pimlico Race Course with Run Dusty Run, another Dust Commander colt who has finished worse than second just once in 15 career starts but is listed at only 8-1 in the early odds.

Bell City & Bloomfield are BWSL winners

Bell City is the only remaining undefeated team in the Bootheel Womens Softball League after last night's action at Farris Field.

Bell City rapped out 13 hits against Bernie in the battle between the tournament's two remaining teams in the winners bracket as they took a 16-8 decision. The winners scored five times in the first and four in the second in support of Rampley, who earned the victory.

In the loser's bracket, Bloomfield came on strong in the final three innings to down the Sikeston Bombers 11-9. Bloomfield scored three runs in each of the final three innings to overhaul the Bombers, who had won two straight in the losers braket. Ann Williams homered with one on in the fifth to highlight the Bloomfield comeback. Sikeston scored three in the bottom of the sixth and had the winning run at the plate before the rally was killed.

Tonight, Bloomfield meets Bernie at 7:30, with the winner earning the right to take on Bell City in Saturday night's finals. The first game gets underway at 7:00, and if Bell City loses, a second game will be necessary immediately following.

The British call it 'Granny Bashing'

Battered parents live a nightmare

By Tom Tiede

BALTIMORE — (NEA) — In one respect 69-year-old Esther Doe could be considered a fortunate woman. Though widowed, she does not have to spend her senior years alone. She lives with one of three sons, and his family, and she tells authorities she is thankful she isn't buried in a nursing home or in an oldster's flat.

But according to city officers, Mrs. Doe (a pseudonym) pays dearly for her bit of home. The son resents the mother and beats her regularly and unmercifully. Sometimes he hits her with his fists, other times he uses household objects to do the job. Mrs. Doe, frail and helpless, lives in terror of her child's attacks.

Apparently, the woman does not suffer this kind of astonishing terror and violence alone. Baltimore officials report they often investigate cases where older people have been battered by "sons, daughters, husbands, even nephews and friends of the family." Authorities in other cities agree the phenomenon is a national one.

No one knows the extent of the matter. Police departments say it is a "hidden crime," so rarely reported that some officers say they can only "suppose that it goes on." Few doubt it does go on, however. The reasoning is that if parents can beat children, why not the reverse?

The English even have a name for it: granny bashing.

Janice Richmond of Baltimore's Protective Services agency says the bashing is, in the overall, probably infrequent. But what there is of it is heartbreaking. In the case of Esther Doe, as example, she has thanked city officials for their concern but refuses to leave her son's home; as she says it, "I have nowhere to go."

Elsewhere, authorities say it's the same story:

— In Washington, a 72-year-old retired custodian is banished from his children's apartment most nights from 6 to midnight. If he doesn't go, he's punished. Social workers say he spends the time walking streets or reading newspapers in the bus depot Why does he accept this humiliation? "It ain't right to raise a fuss," he says.

— In Philadelphia, an 89-year-old man is forced to turn his monthly social security check over to his 31-year-old son, an alcoholic. When the father refuses, he is tied to a chair so he can't leave the house. Authorities have tried to get the oldster to file charges, but he is afraid that the son might retaliate for it.

— In a suburb of Chicago, a 75-year-old woman has asked her minister why God doesn't "punish my son for hitting me with his belt." She says that whenever the son has problems, he takes them out on her. The minister has explained that the courts stand ready to punish her son, but she says she couldn't bear to see him imprisoned.

Authorities are struck by the reluctance of the bashing victims to complain about the atrocities, or to flee the hostilities. One reason may be that some do not even realize they are being abused. Philadelphia social worker Victorina Perralta says violence is so common in the society, some seniors think it's part of the normal order.

Beyond this, says Janice Richmond, many of the victims live in fear of the unknown. A brutal son is a known quantity, and parents may prefer that to the uncertainties of abrupt change. Janet Jamar, New York City's Office of Aging, says its like the "Nursing Home Syndrome — no one dares to complain for fear things will get even worse."

And too, the lack of complaining victims may in some case be tied to the family fortress. Dr. Mike Miller, director of a nursing home in White Plains, N.Y., believes "a mother will tolerate almost anything by a child." When mothers become dependent on the child, the tolerance deepens. Hence granny bashing remains all in the family.

Dr. Miller, by the way, does not define granny bashing narrowly. He says there are more and worse ways for children to bash their parents than with fists. "We abuse by destroying their roles," he says, "we abuse by rejecting them, we abuse by suggesting they've lived too long, that our lives are precious but their lives are not."

Miller believes the physical side of granny bashing is dramatic, but the psychological aspects are far more prevalent. Others concur. Vince Porter, of New York City's department of social services, says he's not personally seen a case where children have beaten their parents, "but I've seen them abandon a father or mother on the street."

Beyond this, says Janice Richmond, many of the victims live in fear of the unknown. A brutal son is a known quantity, and parents may prefer that to the uncertainties of abrupt change. Janet Jamar, New York City's Office of Aging, says its like the "Nursing Home Syndrome — no one dares to complain for fear things will get even worse."

And too, the lack of complaining victims may in some case be tied to the family fortress. Dr. Mike Miller, director of a nursing home in White Plains, N.Y., believes "a mother will tolerate almost anything by a child." When mothers become dependent on the child, the tolerance deepens. Hence granny bashing remains all in the family.

Dr. Miller, by the way, does not define granny bashing narrowly. He says there are more and worse ways for children to bash their parents than with fists. "We abuse by destroying their roles," he says, "we abuse by rejecting them, we abuse by suggesting they've lived too long, that our lives are precious but their lives are not."

Miller believes the physical side of granny bashing is dramatic, but the psychological aspects are far more prevalent. Others concur. Vince Porter, of New York City's department of social services, says he's not personally seen a case where children have beaten their parents, "but I've seen them abandon a father or mother on the street."

$20,000 for SeMo U.

Lynton B. Russell, left, of Mission, Tex., has given Southeast Missouri State University $20,000 to endow a home economics scholarship in the name of his wife, the late Lucile Farrar Russell. This contribution was in the form of an interest bearing note which, added to the principal, will total $38,000 when fully paid. The late Mrs. Ruseell was a home economics major at Southeast Missouri State from 1913-1916. Her grandfather, Dr. G. W. Farrar, was a member of the university's first Board of Regents. According to the terms of the donor, the scholarship will be awarded on the basis of financial need and academic promise. The amount of the scholarship will vary according to the financial need of the recipient. Russell, who was born in Ironton, Mo., and is a retired citrus grower, also specified that the scholarship may be continued throughout an undergraduate career, as long as the student remains in good standing. However, if the recipient changes from home economics to another major, the funds received become a loan and must be repaid. Only the interest from Russell's gift will be allocated to the scholarship. The principal will remain invested in order to continue to award additional scholarships on a permanent basis. Russell began discussions with the university about a memorial scholarship in his wife's name almost two years ago. He personally visited the campus recently and presented his gift to Dr. William L. Tomlinson Jr., right, of St. Louis, president of the Board of Regents.

HELPFUL TIPS

All Around The House

By using electricity wisely you'll be helping to control your electric bill without sacrificing your comfort or convenience. Here are some tips from experts at Edison Electric Institute.

1. Regularly clean or replace air filters on appliances (exhaust hoods, humidifiers, etc.). Clogged filters impair performance and cause the units to run longer.

2. Turn off TV sets that are not being watched. Children, especially, are likely to leave a set on when called outside to play or summoned at mealtimes.

Even when turned off, so-called "instant-on" TV sets draw some current to maintain selected circuits on standby readiness. Unplug sets having this feature when they won't be used for lengthy periods such as overnight or during vacations.

3. When it is time to shop for the next color TV set, look for the label "100 percent solid state." Solid-state designs draw about one-third less current than tube sets and, because they dissipate less heat, put a lighter burden on the cooling system.

4. First iron those fabrics that require lower temperatures and work up to those requiring higher heat. An iron heats faster than it cools so it's quicker to go from low to high than the reverse. Less energy will be needed, too.

Turn off the iron five minutes or so before all clothes have been ironed, and finish ironing with the heat stored in the soleplate.

Always turn off the iron when work is interrupted by telephone or doorbell.

5. Store soiled dishes and glassware in the dishwasher until it is fully loaded. Dishwashers draw the same amount of power whether operated full or empty.

6. When time permits, open the dishwasher door at end of the rinse phase to permit dishes to dry by natural convection. Some new machines feature a push-button control for bypassing the "dry" portion of the cycle.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Swallowing is eased

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read in your column that anyone who had trouble swallowing should see a doctor for an examination. I went promptly to the University Hospital for examination and X rays.

They took a rubber tube and expanded the esophagus. That opened up the tube that goes to my stomach. Now I can eat anything I desire and I don't have any stoppage as before. I was starving to death.

I don't know what caused it as I do not smoke. I am well into my 70s.

DEAR READER — Thank you for sharing your experience with other column readers. I am glad you were so successful in obtaining relief of your obstruction of the esophagus.

The esophagus tube that connects to the stomach is sometimes constricted at its lower end, just before the stomach. When the constriction becomes severe it may prevent food from entering the stomach.

Some of these obstructions are caused by the irritating effects of the acid-digestive juices leaking backward — out of the stomach into the lower esophagus. After years of this the lower esophagus is scarred and contracted. This is one reason why a person with esophageal reflux problems — which may or may not be associated with a hiatal hernia of the stomach through the diaphragm — needs to follow a good preventive program.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Swallowing is eased

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read in your column that anyone who had trouble swallowing should see a doctor for an examination. I went promptly to the University Hospital for examination and X rays.

They took a rubber tube and expanded the esophagus. That opened up the tube that goes to my stomach. Now I can eat anything I desire and I don't have any stoppage as before. I was starving to death.

I don't know what caused it as I do not smoke. I am well into my 70s.

DEAR READER — Thank you for sharing your experience with other column readers. I am glad you were so successful in obtaining relief of your obstruction of the esophagus.

The esophagus tube that connects to the stomach is sometimes constricted at its lower end, just before the stomach. When the constriction becomes severe it may prevent food from entering the stomach.

Some of these obstructions are caused by the irritating effects of the acid-digestive juices leaking backward — out of the stomach into the lower esophagus. After years of this the lower esophagus is scarred and contracted. This is one reason why a person with esophageal reflux problems — which may or may not be associated with a hiatal hernia of the stomach through the diaphragm — needs to follow a good preventive program.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, May 20, the 140th day of 1977. There are 225 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1862, President Abraham Lincoln signed the Homestead Act, providing millions of acres of free land to settlers in the American West.

On this date:

In 1507, Christopher Columbus died in Spain.

In 1861, North Carolina voted to secede from the Union.

In 1834, the French hero of the American Revolution, Marquis de Lafayette, died.

In 1927, Carles Lindbergh began his solo flight across the Atlantic to Paris.

In 1943, during World War II, the United States and Britain ratified a treaty abolishing extra-territorial rights in China.

In 1974, U.S. Judge John Sirica rejected White House arguments and ordered President Richard Nixon to turn over Watergate tapes and other records subpoenaed by the special prosecutor.

Ten years ago: Communist MIGs challenged U.S. jets over North Vietnam, and American pilots claimed that five, or possibly six, of the MIGs were shot down.

One year ago: The U.S. Senate voted to put off until February a decision on whether to produce the controversial B1 strategic bomber.

Today's birthdays: Actor James Stewart is 69 years old. Hockey star Stan Mikita is 37 years old.

Thought for today: "The one serious conviction that a man should have is that nothing is to be taken too seriously." — Samuel Butler, English writer, 1835-1902.

In 1927, Carles Lindbergh began his solo flight across the Atlantic to Paris.

In 1943, during World War II, the United States and Britain ratified a treaty abolishing extra-territorial rights in China.

In 1974, U.S. Judge John Sirica rejected White House arguments and ordered President Richard Nixon to turn over Watergate tapes and other records subpoenaed by the special prosecutor.

Ten years ago: Communist MIGs challenged U.S. jets over North Vietnam, and American pilots claimed that five, or possibly six, of the MIGs were shot down.

One year ago: The U.S. Senate voted to put off until February a decision on whether to produce the controversial B1 strategic bomber.

Today's birthdays: Actor James Stewart is 69 years old. Hockey star Stan Mikita is 37 years old.

Thought for today: "The one serious conviction that a man should have is that nothing is to be taken too seriously." — Samuel Butler, English writer, 1835-1902.

tonight to raise funds in Lindbergh's name for scholarships in aerospace and the environment. Other Lindbergh Fund dinners are beinv held tonight in Los Angeles and Saturday night in Houston.

A major celebration today and Saturday is planned at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, where Lindbergh's original plane is on permanent display.

Both the United States and France are issuing commemorative stamps.

Tonight NBC broadcasts the 1957 movie "The Spirit of St. Louis," with James Stewart as Lindbergh; ABC is showing a special featuring people who were with Lindbergh in the 1920s; and PBS is showing "From Kitty Hawk to Paris."

In France, President Valery Giscard d'Estaing is scheduled to lay a wreath on June 3 at the plaque marking Lindbergh's landing site at Le Bourget airport — the spot where he was mobbed 50 years ago. American officials and Lindbergh's son Scott will lay a wreath there June 4, the day the French government issues a Lindbergh commemorative stamp.

Two American pilots in modern small planes plan to retrace Lindbergh's route, taking off today. They are David Gray, 27, of Lakeland, Fla., and Texas lawyer Phillip Hardberger.

In San Diego, surviving members of the 53-man crew that built the "Spirit of St. Louis" were honored at a Rotary Club luncheon Thursday.

The re-enactment of Lindbergh's takeoff in St. Louis kicks off a weekend of celebration that includes a parade, a banquet, an air show and a fireworks display. The replica airplane is built from the same materials as the original — the only concessions to modernity being brakes on the landing gear and a radio.

With the plane as its centerpiece, the parade will wind through downtown St. Louis Saturday morning. On Saturday night Maurice Bellonte, who with fellow Frenchman Dieudonne Costes flew non-stop from Paris to New York in 1930 to complete the round trip begun by Lindbergh, will attend a dinner at which the first Spirit of St. Louis Aviation Award will be presented to another aviation figure.

open a beauty shop at her home on Moore Avenue.

The home occupation ordinance says a home may be used as a business if there is no sign or display indicating the building is being used as a business, no food is prepared, there are no employes other than the immediate family residing on the premises, and no mechanical equipment other than that which can be considered domestic or household.

Beauty shops and barber shops are now excluded from the provisions and the commission feels they should not be.

Annexation request

The commission tabled a request from John Hux, for the annexation of 430 acres north of Salcedo Road west of the Frisco Railroad tracks.

The commission asked Church to include the request in the feasibility study of the annexation request by Ridgeview and Pecan Groves subdivisions.

Protests

A group of resident living south of Helen Street again protested the lack of a stop sign on Helen Street at Pine Street. They said the stop sign is needed because that intersection is the only one their children can cross to get to Matthews School.

Over 200 residents from that area recently signed a petition calling for the stop sign.

Church said the traffic committee rejected the stop sign request a year ago because they do not like to put stop signs on through streets.

Church added that the committee would meet again in a few weeks and would be presented the petition.

Rezoning requests

Two rezoning requests were recommended for approval. A request by Louis Jimmerson for the rezoning of two lots on Luther Street between Osage and Washington streets from two-family mobile home to commercial and for the rezoning of several lots on the Schuerenberg property south of Highway 60 from commercial to light industrial.

Officers

The commission re-elected Bob Stearnes as chairman and Ron Grojean as vice chairman.

Thieves take police radio

CHARLESTON — Police are investigating the theft of a police radio valued at $450 taken sometime Thursday afternoon from the Mississippi County Rescue Service truck parked at 100 Missouri St.

Woman charged with fighting

DEXTER — Two young women were arrested for fighting and peace disturbance Thursday night on the grounds of the Strawberry Festival across from a row of taverns in Dexter.

Police said Stacy Bazzaria, 18, of Dexter and Joanne Garrison, 17, of Malden were charged and released on their own recognizance.

They are to appear for trial on May 23 in City Court before Judge Herb Aarant.

Nobody was injured in the fight and it is not known what the fight was about, police said today.

Students celebrate, causing 'big mess'

MATTHEWS — An apparent early morning celebration today by school students caused considerable vandalism described as "a big mess, but little damage" at the Matthews School the New Madrid County Sheriff's Department said today.

Deputy sheriff Ronnie Patterson said that obscenities had been written on the back of the school building with black paint and it appeared that about two cases of toilet paper had been draped all over the school yard in trees and shrubs.

A farm tractor and cotton trailer taken from the Matthews Gin had been driven to the school and the tractor had been driven onto the front steps of the school. The trailer was parked in front of the school gym.

An abundant supply of eggs and aerosol shaving cream was used over the premises. To top off the acts, a camper top had been taken off a pickup truck and placed on the roof of the gymnasium.

Patterson said the vandalism occurred after 2 a.m. today.

Portageville baccalaureate set Sunday

PORTAGEVILLE — A baccalaureate service for the 1977 Portageville High School graduating class will be conducted at 3 p.m. Sunday in the high school gymnasium.

The Rev. E. A. Boyer will deliver the sermon, the Rev. David Richardson will offer the invocation and the Rev. E. G. Stolle will give the benediction.

A select choir will sing two selections, "God Is My Shepard" and "Hallalujah".

Tape player taken from woman's car

An eight - track tape player was taken from a car belonging to Patty Harris, 224 Petroleum St., between midnight Wednesday and 9 a.m. Thursday, accoding to the Public Safety Department.

The player, worth $50, was taken while the car was parked at the home.

MATTHEWS — An apparent early morning celebration today by school students caused considerable vandalism described as "a big mess, but little damage" at the Matthews School the New Madrid County Sheriff's Department said today.

Deputy sheriff Ronnie Patterson said that obscenities had been written on the back of the school building with black paint and it appeared that about two cases of toilet paper had been draped all over the school yard in trees and shrubs.

A farm tractor and cotton trailer taken from the Matthews Gin had been driven to the school and the tractor had been driven onto the front steps of the school. The trailer was parked in front of the school gym.

An abundant supply of eggs and aerosol shaving cream was used over the premises. To top off the acts, a camper top had been taken off a pickup truck and placed on the roof of the gymnasium.

Patterson said the vandalism occurred after 2 a.m. today.

Portageville baccalaureate set Sunday

PORTAGEVILLE — A baccalaureate service for the 1977 Portageville High School graduating class will be conducted at 3 p.m. Sunday in the high school gymnasium.

The Rev. E. A. Boyer will deliver the sermon, the Rev. David Richardson will offer the invocation and the Rev. E. G. Stolle will give the benediction.

A select choir will sing two selections, "God Is My Shepard" and "Hallalujah".

Tape player taken from woman's car

An eight - track tape player was taken from a car belonging to Patty Harris, 224 Petroleum St., between midnight Wednesday and 9 a.m. Thursday, accoding to the Public Safety Department.

The player, worth $50, was taken while the car was parked at the home.

How to Win by Quitting

Nobody likes a quitter, but the American Cancer Society loves the man, woman, or teenager, who quits cigarettes because this habit kills thousands of Americans each year. Nearly all lung cancer could be prevented if the cigarette habit vanished from the American scene, reports the ACS whose volunteers have practical advice, free information and lots of encouragement to help you quit.

OPERATION FRIENDSHIP

NEW YORK (AP) — A Canadian veteran's idea for former servicemen and women stationed in England during World War II to return to the country as peacetime visitors led to the recent launching of "Operation Friendship" here by Admiral of the Fleet the Earl Mountbatten of Burma.

A suggestion letter from the Canadian veteran was taken up by British tourist officials as particularly appropriate for this year — Queen Elizabeth's Silver Jubilee.

Lord Mountbatten, last of the Allied Supreme Commanders, one of Britain's most famous veterans and cousin of the Queen, presented the first Operation Friendship Welcome Card to a Flushing, N.Y., couple who met in England during the war and married.

These cards are given out free at British Tourist Authority offices in this country to any American veteran. They are a kind of passport to special welcome arrangements in Britain, including a book of coupons giving discounts on food, accommodations, entertainment and guide services.

The first umbrella was invented by an Englishman, Samuel Fox, in 1852.

A tub bath generally requires less water than a shower. The amount of water used for each can be compared by plugging the tub during a shower and measuring the top levels for each.

SAIL BICYCLE?

FOREST PARK, Mo. (AP) — A tall sail billowing in the breeze over the asphalt of a parking lot can't match the Yankee Clipper for glamor, but it sure attracts attention.

"I get a lot of people asking me about my sail bike," says Grant MacLaren, probably the only sail bike skipper in the area.

"About three years ago, I read an article about a man who invented a sail bicycle," he explained. "I was fascinated, so I built one myself."

The 40-year-old coordinator of instructional resources for the St. Louis Community College District also traveled to Darien, Conn., to talk to George Patterson, the inventor of the sail bike.

"I was enthusiastic about his idea and told him I would be glad to be the Midwest representative," MacLaren said. "I am, but we haven't sold any."

CARE Gift Cards Help Needy Families

NEW YORK (AP) — Special holiday gift cards to send greetings to friends, relatives and business associates, which at the same time will help needy families around the world, are now available from CARE, according to Frank L. Goffio, executive director of the overseas aid and development agency.

"Send the names and addresses on your holiday gift list, with a minimum contribution of $2, to CARE, Dept. HOL, Box 570, New York, N.Y. 10016, or any regional CARE office," Goffio explained. "The attractive cards and envelopes will be sent to you by return mail."

Goffio cited examples of how much good a holiday gift can accomplish: $5 serves up to 30 children a daily bowl of porridge for a month; $10 provides a group of farmers training for growing more food; $15 keeps a CARE-MEDICO nurse on duty for a full day training local nurses and tending patients; $25 gives thousands of children nourishing food, helping them grow into healthy, productive adults.

The harvest in the Clarksburg area of California's Inland Delta region can yield some corn farmers up to 280 bushels to the acre, or almost twice as much as the average crop output in Iowa, the center of the U.S. corn belt.

BOOK REVIEW

ADOLF HITLER. By John Toland. Doubleday. 1,035 Pages. $14.95.

John Toland's "Adolf Hitler" attempts to make humanly believable a man whose deeds so horrified a generation that he is usually seen in inhuman distortion. The result is a compelling historical narrative that runs 897 pages plus notes and will leave many readers wishing it were longer.

There is no lack of material on the life and times of Adolf Hitler. Books, records and documents abound. On top of this, Toland lists interviews with more than 150 persons who knew Hitler or were close to him — his secretaries, doctors, associates and their families — to gain the personal insight that enriches the book. Many of the former Nazis interviewed were speaking out for the first time, persuaded that after 30 years it was time to give their version of events.

The well-known outline of Hitler's life does not change. And the bulk of the detail is not new. But Toland puts it together with the fine hand of a historian who won a Pulitzer Prize with his previous book, "The Rising Sun: The Decline and Fall of the Japanese Empire, 1936-45."

Against the background of Germany's political and economic chaos after World War I, Toland follows step by step Hitler's rise to control of the political party that he was originally assigned to observe as a low-ranking member of Germany's shrunken postwar armed forces.

His emergence as a hypnotic speaker who could sway huge crowds, hard to believe in retrospect, is documented by the comments of those who heard him at the struggling party meetings, before he had the impressive staging and mass hysteria that came once the party was rich and the nation in its control.

Toland calls Hitler "probably the greatest mover and shaker of the 20th century." Although it may have seemed so to many, Hitler did not just suddenly arrive at that peak from nowhere. One of the great merits of Toland's book is his tracing of Hitler's rise to a position of unequaled power.

With a wealth of evidence Toland buries the myth that Hitler did not know of the death camps and extermination of six million Jews and would have stopped the inhuman program had he not been duped by underlings. Toland establishes that Hitler was the author of the program and at considerable sacrifice and cost in the face of a hopeless war continued his maniacal, personal ambition to rid Europe of Jews.

If the book has a fault, it is that Hitler's years in power are less believable than his rise to power. On the larger international platform on which Hitler now played, his own personal contribution is sometimes lost. Toland keeps in tight grasp the world political developments and indulges curiosity about such personal details as the man's health and girl friends, but somewhere we miss just how Hitler achieved what he did, especially in those early years in office.

Just what was his personal role in bringing economic order out of chaos, in reorganizing German life and raising a prostrate nation to pride and position and a degree of wealth that impressed Olympic visitors in 1936? These are the achievements that prompt Toland to observe, "If Hitler had died in 1937 on the fourth anniversary of his coming to power — the great economic crisis notwithstanding — he would undoubtedly have gone down as one of the greatest figures in German history."

We are told Hitler had a photographic memory, rapid grasp of written reports and of situations, and acted sometimes on impulse and sometimes with great patience. But the details of how he ran things in those crucial years are missing.

It can only be a compliment to such a big book to ask for more.

SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Boy Scouts in Troop 151 here are helping themselves and the environment by collecting old tires and are also solving a raw material problem for a local tire retreader.

The troop collected more than 1,500 old tires for Fred's, a retreader in nearby Orange and earned more than $600 for troop projects.

The recycling drive, in addition to ridding the landscape of discarded tires, helped save oil — it takes three times more oil to make a new tire than it does to make a retread.

Fraternity elects Kinsey

Robert Alan Kinsey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Kinsey, Route One, was recently elected vice president of the Delta Chi Fraternity at Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau. Delta Chi is the newest and one of the largest social organizations on SeMo U's campus.

Kinsey, a 1975 graduate of Scott County Central High School at Morley, is a junior majoring in business administration - marketing management and is minoring in psychology. He is on the Dean's Honor List for the spring term with a grade point average of 3.538 out of a possible 4.0.

During his first two years, Kinsey has been a representative of Towers South House Council, a Student Government Association representative and a member of the Golden Eagles Marching Band. He is currently employed by Cherokee Vending Co. of Cape Girardeau.

New Sponsor For 4-H Citizenship Program

CHICAGO—Beginning this year, 4-H members get another assist in their quest for excellence. They have the support and encouragement of The Coca-Cola Company and participating Coca-Cola bottlers through sponsorship of the national 4-H citizenship program, Norman C. Mindrum, executive vice-president of National 4-H Council, announced.

The program provides incentives and recognition to 4-H'ers at each level of participation. Recognition includes educational scholarships of $1,000 each to nine national winners, and expense-paid trips to the 56th National 4-H Congress, Nov. 27-Dec. 1 in Chicago, to one winner per state, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico. Additionally, up to four 4-H members in each county can earn medals of honor.

Young people enrolled during 1977 in a variety of 4-H citizenship projects and activities may be eligible for recognition if they meet requirements set by the Cooperative Extension Service, which conducts the 4-H program and selects the awards winners.

Throughout its history, the 4-H program has placed a strong emphasis on citizenship development. It is an integral part of 4-H training in all clubs, and is reflected in all projects and activities conducted by 4-H boys and girls 9-19. In 1976, more than 4 million young people participated in the 4-H citizenship program.

In announcing sponsorship of the program, Donald R. Keough, executive vice-president, The Coca-Cola Company, said: "4-H provides a real opportunity for youth to acquire knowledge and life skills, develop responsible attitudes and become productive citizens. We feel privileged to be able to participate, through sponsorship of the national 4-H citizenship awards, in this program which represents the highest ideals of the American tradition.

"We also are pleased to have the support and participation of many Coca-Cola bottlers in this program," Keough added. "Their leadership and dedication to community involvement assures expansion of the citizenship program at the local level."

With headquarters in Atlanta, The Coca-Cola Company joins more than 200 other private sector donors supporting 4-H educational programs through the National 4-H Council.

More information on the national 4-H citizenship program is available from county extension agents.

The first roll of photographic film was patented by George Eastman in 1884.

HOME GARDENERS FACE HAZARDS

A smart home gardene understands more than simply how to grow and protect his plants. He alsc understands how to protect his eyes from injury. The National Society for the Prevention of Blindness suggests that a gardener wear safety goggles while working in the following ways.

When using power equipment. Lawn mowers can throw up sticks, stones and debris. Onlookers should wear goggles, too.

When using fertilizers and pesticides. These are made with corrosive chemicals so a gardener should wear a special chemical-type goggle. If an accident should occur, flush the eye out with water tor about 15 minutes; then call a doctor.

When burning poison ivy. The fumes can be irritating to eyes.

When using a chain saw. It can throw chips of wood into eyes.

When trimming rose and other bushes. Many have thorns that can puncture the eyes.

That hint of wood smoke drifting on the autumn air just might be your roof burning.

It's a little early for Halloween, but the pumpkinhead next door is lit up every evening.

We're putting out a coffee called "Parachute." It's good till the SECOND-last drop.

Our secretary wants to know where she can get a male-order catalogue.

No one yet has invented anything quite like a mayonnaise-and-chili sandwich, for which let us all be profoundly thankful.

In these liberated days, one wouldn't dare declare a "boycott."

Double-digit price inflation has been practiced for years by the quick-fingered cashier at the local beanery.

HOME GARDENERS FACE HAZARDS

A smart home gardene understands more than simply how to grow and protect his plants. He alsc understands how to protect his eyes from injury. The National Society for the Prevention of Blindness suggests that a gardener wear safety goggles while working in the following ways.

When using power equipment. Lawn mowers can throw up sticks, stones and debris. Onlookers should wear goggles, too.

When using fertilizers and pesticides. These are made with corrosive chemicals so a gardener should wear a special chemical-type goggle. If an accident should occur, flush the eye out with water tor about 15 minutes; then call a doctor.

When burning poison ivy. The fumes can be irritating to eyes.

When using a chain saw. It can throw chips of wood into eyes.

When trimming rose and other bushes. Many have thorns that can puncture the eyes.

Depro given fellowship to seminar

UNIVERSITY, Miss. — Charles R. Depro of Sikeston, Mo. has been awarded a fellowship to the Robert A. Taft Institute of Government Seminar to be held at The University of Mississippi June 6 8 22.

Depro is among 35 social studies teachers across Mississippi, Louisiana and Missouri participating in the seminar.

The Taft Seminar program provides opportunities for teachers to learn about the workings of the American political system from party leaders, elected officials, lobbyists, jounralists and political scientists. Ole Miss is one of 36 institutions selected to host the seminars this year.

Dr. Stanley E. Easton, associate professor of Secondary Education and Educational Media at Ole Miss, is seminar director.

Agnew gets college degree

Willis Donald Agnew of Sikeston received a Bachelor of Science degree in nuclear medicine technology from the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences College in Little Rock May 14.

Local hospitals are still trying to unload patients who celebrated the recent Fourth with a fifth.

The state with the greatest population density is New Jersey, which has 953 people for every square mile.

Lane gets UMC degree

COLUMBIA — Willie L. Lane, a University of Missouri-Columbia student who participated in the campus's Project START Program, received a bachelor of agriculture degree in agricultural economics May 14 at UMC.

The son of Mrs. Bernice Lane, 307 Alabama St., Sikeston, Willie Lane is a graduate of Sikeston High School.

Now beginning its sixth year at UMC, Project START (Success Through Advance Residence Training) is a dropout prevention program to respond to minority students' problems. During their first year at UMC, students who participate in Project START come to the Columbia campus two days in advance of the summer session for orientation.

Students attend summer school, participate in intensive study skills sessions and receive personal and vocational counseling. The services remain available during the students' attendance at UMC.

Woman charges parents with brutality

(EDITOR'S NOTE: For years news accounts have told of the parental anguish involved when young people break away from family values to join controversial religious sects. But theirs is not the only anguish. The following report is the other side of the story.)

By Tom Tiede

MINNEAPOLIS — (NEA) — Until she was 16 years old Nancy Lofgren was her parents' daughter. They were conservative, she was conservative; they were establishment, she was establishment. "They wanted me to be the All-American girl," she says, "go to the Lutheran church, go to college, get married, have children, and live right."

At 16, Lofgren began to rebel. She quit the Lutheran church. At first she says her parents were concerned but not abusive. Perhaps they thought it was momentary madness. Teenagers do pass through stages. Besides this, it was the early 1970s, kids everywhere were searching for new horizons before returning to old truths.

But Lofgren was not to return. When she was 18, she and other friends from high school came into contact with an obscure religious movement led by an Indian convert to Christianity named Rama Behera. Lofgren insists that she joined with her eyes open. She says she was not brainwashed. "I just liked what they stood for."

What the movement stood for was and is religion according to the Book of Acts. That part of the Bible records the commisssion given by Christ to his disciples to go forth "unto the uttermost parts of the earth" to create the first church. In effect, Acts is a brief report of the history of the Christian movement.

Lofgren says the followers of Rama Behera conduct themselves according to the leads given by the disciples in Acts. The sect has no formal structuring, no membership rolls, no official church. "We meet in each other's homes, as the disciples did, and what we do is read the Bible, pray, be happy, and live as fundamental Christians."

At the time Lofgren joined the sect, it was virtually unknown in Minnesota. That is to say it did not have an image at all, good or bad. Still, Lofgren's parents were worried. "They couldn't understand it," she says, "all they understand is Lutheranism. If I'd have joined the Catholic church they would have been equally upset."

As it was, the parents were more than upset. They insisted that the girl come to her senses and come home. When it became clear she would not, she says they decided to force her compliance. In May of last year, according to the daughter, the parents told their story to friends who then "conspired to kidnap me against my will."

By then Lofgren was no longer a feisty teenager. "I was 21 years old, and I thought that made me a free person in this country."

The first two times Gene Tenace, then with Oakland, came to bat in World Series action he hit home runs. It was in 1972.

Woman charges parents with brutality

(EDITOR'S NOTE: For years news accounts have told of the parental anguish involved when young people break away from family values to join controversial religious sects. But theirs is not the only anguish. The following report is the other side of the story.)

By Tom Tiede

MINNEAPOLIS — (NEA) — Until she was 16 years old Nancy Lofgren was her parents' daughter. They were conservative, she was conservative; they were establishment, she was establishment. "They wanted me to be the All-American girl," she says, "go to the Lutheran church, go to college, get married, have children, and live right."

At 16, Lofgren began to rebel. She quit the Lutheran church. At first she says her parents were concerned but not abusive. Perhaps they thought it was momentary madness. Teenagers do pass through stages. Besides this, it was the early 1970s, kids everywhere were searching for new horizons before returning to old truths.

But Lofgren was not to return. When she was 18, she and other friends from high school came into contact with an obscure religious movement led by an Indian convert to Christianity named Rama Behera. Lofgren insists that she joined with her eyes open. She says she was not brainwashed. "I just liked what they stood for."

What the movement stood for was and is religion according to the Book of Acts. That part of the Bible records the commisssion given by Christ to his disciples to go forth "unto the uttermost parts of the earth" to create the first church. In effect, Acts is a brief report of the history of the Christian movement.

Lofgren says the followers of Rama Behera conduct themselves according to the leads given by the disciples in Acts. The sect has no formal structuring, no membership rolls, no official church. "We meet in each other's homes, as the disciples did, and what we do is read the Bible, pray, be happy, and live as fundamental Christians."

At the time Lofgren joined the sect, it was virtually unknown in Minnesota. That is to say it did not have an image at all, good or bad. Still, Lofgren's parents were worried. "They couldn't understand it," she says, "all they understand is Lutheranism. If I'd have joined the Catholic church they would have been equally upset."

As it was, the parents were more than upset. They insisted that the girl come to her senses and come home. When it became clear she would not, she says they decided to force her compliance. In May of last year, according to the daughter, the parents told their story to friends who then "conspired to kidnap me against my will."

By then Lofgren was no longer a feisty teenager. "I was 21 years old, and I thought that made me a free person in this country."

THERE'S A LOT OF HUMAN INTEREST IN CLASSIFIED

People are our business. Little people and big people . . . young and old. They come to us for a lot of different reasons . . . personal reasons like finding a lost dog or locating a housekeeper or babysitter. Maybe it's a matter of selling an antique or getting a job. Whatever it might be, the Classified Ads play an important part in getting people together. That's human interest . . . and there's a lot of that in the Classified Ads.

THERE'S A LOT OF HUMAN INTEREST IN CLASSIFIED

People are our business. Little people and big people . . . young and old. They come to us for a lot of different reasons . . . personal reasons like finding a lost dog or locating a housekeeper or babysitter. Maybe it's a matter of selling an antique or getting a job. Whatever it might be, the Classified Ads play an important part in getting people together. That's human interest . . . and there's a lot of that in the Classified Ads.

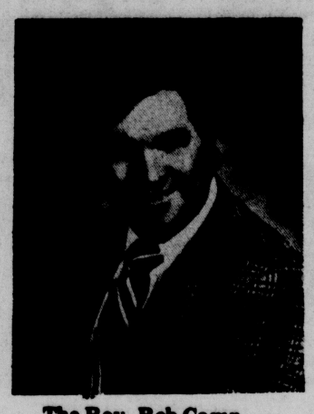
Revival to feature noted evangelist



The Rev. Bob Camp

The Trinity Chapel Church of God, 107 Sixth St., will begin a revival service featuring the Rev. Bob Camp, internationally known evangelist, Wednesday. The revival will continue until May 29. All services will begin at 7:30 p.m. except the Sunday services, which will begin at 6:30 p.m.

The Rev. Mr. Camp, a native of Georgia, served in the U.S. Navy and was a contractor before he began his career in the ministry. He attended Calvary Bible College in Kansas City and completed his formal Bible training at Life Bible College at Los angeles, Calif. He founded and pastored a church at Rosenburg, Tex., and acted as associate director of the Teen Challenge Organization, which works with drug addicts, for three and a half years.

Jean Tolbert is pastor of the Trinity chapel Church of God.

Music group to perform

New Song, a music group from Oral Roberts University in Tulsa, Okla., will appear Sunday at 11 a.m. at the Bell City United Methodist Church. New Song, under the direction of ORU graduate student Keith Brandt, is composed of four men and three women, all students at ORU, with majors varying from Music to Theology. New Song's goal is to present a "new song," the message that Jesus Christ came to give everyone life. The group is one of nine touring the United States, singing in various denominations. The members usually spend two to four days in each church during their ten and one-half week tour. Their program will include a variety of singing, sharing, and drama skits, which appeal to all ages. New Song is part of the Summer Music Ministries program at ORU, which is under the direction of Jerry Florence. The program began two years ago with a group which toured throughout the southeastern part of the country. This first group was so widely accepted that in the following year ORU sent out four groups to about 20 states. This summer's music teams involve 80 students, and a recent campus survey indicated that more than 600 ORU students would like to become involved in the program. The public is cordially invited.

THE BIBLE

No. 292. Obey the Laws

The prophet Malachi spoke of God's love and care for Israel, and of Israel's defiance of God's laws. He then turned to predict that there would come a time when God would judge the good men and the evil men, those who had served Him, and those who had not.

"For, behold, the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall." (Malachi 4:1-2)

"And ye shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of hosts. Remember ye the law of Moses my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, with the statutes and judgments." (Malachi 4:3-4)

Rise in malpractice suits promises higher legal bills

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

A growing number of lawyers are being sued for malpractice today, bringing higher insurance premiums for the attorneys and paving the way for bigger legal bills for consumers.

The situation is similar to the one that developed in the medical profession several years ago and some experts say the potential for trouble is even greater.

The American Bar Association's National Institute recently sponsored a cmnference in New York on "Malpractice of Trial Lawyers," drawing more than 100 persons to discuss existing standards under which lawyers may be held accountable for the results of their actions and to consider future alternatives.

Francis J. McCarthy, general counsel for The Travelers Insurance Cos. of Hartford, Conn., which insures many lawyers, told the conference that a report by one major insurer showed that in 1972, the company had one claim for every 41 lawyers it covered. By 1975, the number of claims had risen to one for every 29 lawyers insured.

The dollar value of the average claim also rose, McCarthy said, from $5,622 in 1972 to $11,-936 in 1975.

Requests for rate increases of several hundred per cent by companies writing legal malpractice insurance are becomming increasingly frequent, he added. Some premiums have jumped 500 per cent and more in a single year.

In an interview in San Francisco, attorney James Hadfield said he paid an average of $515 last year for malpractice insurance covering each of the 12 lawyers in his office. This year, the charge went up to $4,093.

"There will unquestionably be an economic effect on a client," said Hadfield. "This means fewer clients will be served simply because they will be unable to pay the price. The guy in the middle will be the hardest hit ... Price increases won't noticeably affect the rich and the poor will still be served by public defenders."

Lawyers traditionally have been immune from some types of liability. In general terms, the courts have held that a lawyer can be liable only if he is negligent; he cannot be sued successfully for an error of judgment unless that error is due to negligence. Protections for trial lawyers working under pressure are usually broader than those for other attorneys.

McCarthy said the increase in legal malpractice suits was due partly to the consumer movement, "with clients more knowledgeable and willing to sue and more lawyers willing to help them do it."

Ronald E. Mallen, a California attorney, told his colleagues at the New York conference that the number of legal malpractice cases reaching the appellate division is at an all-time high and is expected to continue to soar as claims currently being filed are processed through the legal system. He did not provide specific figures.

Mallen said there are several types of situations that result in people suing lawyers. One is the case eze attorney clearly makes a mistake through negligence — failing to research a situation, for example. Another type of problem arises when, through lack of communication, an attorney does not give the client an accurate picture of the chances of success. Other suits occur following legal actions in which the two parties are particularly hostile — such as a divorce case. The loser wants to get even.

Both Mallen and Donald M. Haskell of Chicago noted that there are some key differences between medical and legal malpractice.

Haskell said that the doctor is dealing with a physicial and reasonably scientific situation; the lawyer is dealing with an emotional one. It is easier to prove the cause of a patient's death or ailment than it is to determine why a verdict went one way instead of the other. "Law is not governed by the rules of nature," Haskell said. "It's made by people."

In addition, he said, the law is basically an adversary situation. Someone must lose. The potential for dissatisfied clients — and malpractice suits — is therefore much greater.

Eugene Jericho, a Texas attorney and chairman of the ABA section on insurance, negligence and compensation law, said that lessening the immunity trial lawyers have from prosecution for malpractice could result in lawyers having to document every decision they make. This could boost costs still further, he said, and could lead to the practice of "defensive law," much as doctors practice "defensive medicine," with extra and sometimes unnecessary tests to protect themselves in case of later lawsuits.

Male teachers hold better jobs

By ROBERT HEETH
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — In the days of the frontier one-room schoolhouse, teaching was considered the province of young women who had not found husbands.

Even today, more than two-thirds of the teachers in Missouri's elementary and secondary schools are women.

But a state study shows that — in salary and in administrative jobs — men have all the better of it in Missouri schools.

The Missouri Board of Education's "Report of the Public Schools" for the 1975-76 school year shows that:

- Male classroom teachers on the average earn about $1,000 more a year than female teachers. Among all certificated personnel, including administrators and teachers, the salary discrepancy rises to $2,000. Men get an average of $12,559 a year; women get $10,525.
- That's not surprising, because women hold few higher-paying administrative jobs. None of Missouri's 458 school superintendents is a woman. There are 147 assistant superintendents. Only four are women.
- Only 248 of the state's 1,838 school principals are women. That's about 15 per cent, but almost all of those are principals of elementary schools. There are only seven female high school principals in the state.
- The average salaries of male principals are about $2,000 more than those of women.
- Fewer than seven per cent of all assistant principals are women.

State and local school officials say most schools don't discriminate by sex in base salary schedules or in hiring practices. If they did, they could lose federal money under antidiscrimination provisions in the Title IX Education Act.

James Ritter, administrative assistant in the Columbia school district, said the district does not have any figures of average salaries by sex.

"They make the same according to tenure in the system." In the past that has caused a natural de facto discrimination, he said, because women were likely to drop out of teaching for several years while having and raising children.

"Many of the women leave after several years," said Donna Ingwersen, Hickman High School social studies teacher. "They're here putting a husband through school or supplementing the family income for a while.

"Most of the men I know are here for a long time."

The trend has been changing, Ritter said. "Women are tending to come back to the profession quicker. Women who take maternity leave now often take only one year."

Thirteen of the 54 administrators in the Columbia school district are women, Ritter said. But only one elementary school principal and four assistant principals are women.

The rest of the 13 are supervisors and directors of programs such as guidance counseling and food services.

"There's been a significant increase in the number of women showing interest in administration," Ritter said. This is perhaps due to a change in past attitudes of discrimination which limited women's opportunities for administrative jobs, he said.

"Because of a lack of opportunities, women did not prepare themselves for administration" by taking enough of the right graduate courses, Ritter said.

Bob G. Woods, dean of the University of Missouri-Columbia, College of Education, said although "there is interest in the department for attracting women, women in the past have shunned graduate programs in education."

Since (opportunities have) opened up, there have been few women with the appropriate experience or education for administration," said John F. Allan, coordinator of management information services of the education department.

For example, Allan estimated only about 10 women in the state are certified to be high school superintendents.

Judy Behnkey, president of the Missouri National Education Association (NEA) chapter, agrees there are not enough qualified women to fill 50 per cent of the administrative jobs.

"But there are more women qualified than there are positions available. Women do apply for administration. But there is a current unwritten practice for school boards to hire men instead of women, especially as high school principals," she said.

"Tradition is still a strong factor," agrees William Higdon, world geography teacher at Hickman High School. "I'm not sure the image of the man as a big, strong administrator doesn't make him much more appealing.

Rise in malpractice suits promises higher legal bills

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

A growing number of lawyers are being sued for malpractice today, bringing higher insurance premiums for the attorneys and paving the way for bigger legal bills for consumers.

The situation is similar to the one that developed in the medical profession several years ago and some experts say the potential for trouble is even greater.

The American Bar Association's National Institute recently sponsored a cmnference in New York on "Malpractice of Trial Lawyers," drawing more than 100 persons to discuss existing standards under which lawyers may be held accountable for the results of their actions and to consider future alternatives.

Francis J. McCarthy, general counsel for The Travelers Insurance Cos. of Hartford, Conn., which insures many lawyers, told the conference that a report by one major insurer showed that in 1972, the company had one claim for every 41 lawyers it covered. Clean water commission affects many in state

By TIM WHITE
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — As the policy making authority for the state's water pollution control program, the Missouri Clean Water Commission affects every industry, municipality, sewer company, agricultural operation or individual making discharges into the state's streams and lakes.

The commission is composed of six members, no more than three from the same political party, appointed to four-year terms by the governor and approved by the Senate.

The commissioners meet monthly around the state and serve without salary, except for compensation for travel expenses to meetings. They are required to have knowledge and interest in water pollution control.

One member is to be a representative of agriculture, with the other five representing the general public. No more than 10 per cent of a commissioner's income can be from a business, industry, municipality or other operation requiring a permit from the commission.

The state's Clean Water Law, amended in 1973 to conform with federal requirements, gives the commission authority to issue National Pollutant Discharge Elimination permits, which serve as state construction and operating permits for municipal and industrial wastewater treatment facilities.

The commission also has authority to review violations of water quality standards, and close down the pollution source or grant temporary exemptions from the law if technology and equipment are not yet available to bring the source into compliance.

Betty E. Wilson, St. Louis, has served on the commission since appointed by Gov. Christopher S. Bond in March 1974. She is a Republican, a housewife and has worked on water pollution control for the St. Louis League of Women Voters, the Audubon Society, the St. Louis Coalition for the Environment and the Open Space Council. Her husband is an attorney in private practice in St. Louis.

Mrs. Wilson said the top priority for the commission is to get citizens involved in the commission's decisions. "The polls show people are enthusiastic (about water pollution control), but it hasn't been translated well in appropriations (of the General Assembly to the commission)."

Mrs. Wilson said "laggardly" appropriations for water pollution control in Missouri have caused weak monitoring of stream quality. "I hope in the future the Department (of Natural Resources) will ask for a larger budget and citizens who support water quality will convince legislators that it is needed," she said.

John Zapf of Bismarck was appointed to the commission by Bond in Aug. 1974. He is a Republican, a farmer, the agricultural representative and vice-chairman of the commission. He also is vice-president of the Missouri Farm Bureau.

Zapf said he is dissatisfied with the present system of federal and state funding of treatment plants and other water quality projects. "So many city managers or government employes have become professional money getters rather than administrators. All they do is cut through paperwork to get federal grants."

Zapf said if local people were spending their own money they would be more careful, would understand the problems and would solve them quicker.

Vance C. Lischer of Cook Station was appointed to the commission by Bond in May 1975. He is a Republican, a retired sanitary consulting engineer and a rural landowner on the upper Meramec River.

He is a member of the American Water Works Association, the Water Pollution Control Association and has served as chairman of the Sanitary Engineering Division of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

He said his interest in clean water came from his occupation and his enjoyment of Ozark streams.

Lischer said he considers himself an environmentalist, but that he is opposed to the philosophy of "environmental obstructionism."

"They've made their point. I wish they'd get out of the way I don't think people want to go back to wilderness living," he said.

"The role of government is to set realistic standards in the pollution field. Much of what we're getting in legislation is emotionally developed."

Lischer said any increase in population requires more development and that tradeoffs with the environment are necessary.

Present terms expire in April 1978 for Mrs. Wilson, Zapf and Lischer.

T. Eugene Cravens of Mansfield was appointed to the commission by Bond in April 1976. He is a Democrat, a farmer with 1,400 head of cattle on 4,000 acres and chairman of the commission.

Cravens said he has tried to represent small towns and rural Missouri.

"Small communities were getting lower priority (for wastewater treatment grants) because of their density of population. I didn't think they were getting their share," he said.

Cravens said problems in small communities are "just as great for the individual person" as problems at large industrial plants and municipalities.

Raymond Sears of Savannah was appointed to the commission by Bond in April 1976. He is a Democrat and an attorney retired from private practice.

Sears said he remembers when the "pendulum swung all the way one way" and people were allowed to do anything to a stream. He said he wants to guard against "letting it swing the other way too far," with arbitrary regulations that would put municipalities, industry and farmers out of business.

Present terms for Cravens, Sears and a seat now vacant on the commission, will expire in April 1980. Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale, with Senate approval, will appoint someone to fill the vacancy. That appointee must be a Democrat, represent the general public and have knowledge and interest in water pollution control.

Commissioners said they are anxious for Teasdale to select someone so they can share their workload.

Watch pound of fat

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 29 year old, 5 feet 5, female, weighing 120 pounds. Last year I went on a diet and lost 35 pounds in four months. All my life I have been overweight and this is the first time I have been successful with a diet.

Since then I can't eat over 900 calories without gaining weight. I try to balance my diet as much as possible but I have no caloric room for bread and other starches or fats. My diet consists of vegetables, cottage cheese, fish, meat and skim milk. Everything I eat is weighed or measured and all calories counted. I average 32 grams of protein a day.

I started an exercise program of running a half mile plus doing setups and pushups 10 minutes each morning. Since then I have gained three pounds without eating more. Something seems to be wrong with my metabolism. Can you give me some suggestions?

I have increased my smoking and consume large amounts of coffee to hold back the hunger and I am so hungry for more good nutritious food. I am becoming very frustrated.

DEAR READER — You are paying too much attention to the scales. What you need is to prevent pounds of fat not pounds of just anything from accumulating.

You probably gained three pounds after exercising because you regained the normal water content of your body. Strict dieting is associated with an abnormal elimination of body water which makes the weight loss look impressive on the scales. Those pounds of water loss are quickly regained with normal sensible living habits.

I strongly disapprove of using cigarettes and coffee in large amounts for your weight control program. That can cause you to be a nervous wreck and develop habits that are really harmful to your health.

You need to develop some patience. I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet and you can use this as a pattern for a normal diet for you. It contains 1200 calories — not just 900. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Note the comments there about exercise. You need to develop and maintain a sensible exercise program. It will help a lot in enabling you to avoid obesity. Your protein intake is a little low, but you will get enough on the diet I am sending you.

Remember there is an equation for weight control, a balance between what you consume and what you use. You can affect your body fat by either limiting what you eat with a diet or by increasing your energy utilization. A combination of the two is usually the most successful. It should then be a lifestyle thereafter. Walking is one of the best exercises because so many people can walk long distances without overdoing it. Try to program an hour's walk into your day's program — even in divided amounts if necessary. You will use an extra 52 calories a mile and if you are able to walk three miles a day you will use an extra 150 calories a day. In a year's time that is equivalent to more than 15 pounds of fat. I'd rather see you walk than starve or smoke or swill down large amounts of coffee.

Because of the volume of mail Dr. Lamb cannot answer your letters personally but he will answer representative letters of general interest in his column. Write to him in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 1019.

SUPERMAN

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Even Superman gets older. Kirk Alyn, who played Superman in 30 movie serials in the late 1940s and early 1950s is now 66 years old and drawing Social Security checks.

"But I feel like I'm 39," the actor said. "And I wish they would stop offering me the same roles."

For years after producers stopped making the serials, Alyn found it difficult to get acting parts. Movie-makers felt the public wouldn't believe him as anybody other than Superman.

"Now I get offers, but it's only for detective roles," he lamented.

"So many city managers or government employes have become professional money getters rather than administrators. All they do is cut through paperwork to get federal grants."

Zapf said if local people were spending their own money they would be more careful, would understand the problems and would solve them quicker.

Vance C. Lischer of Cook Station was appointed to the commission by Bond in May 1975. He is a Republican, a retired sanitary consulting engineer and a rural landowner on the upper Meramec River.

He is a member of the American Water Works Association, the Water Pollution Control Association and has served as chairman of the Sanitary Engineering Division of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

He said his interest in clean water came from his occupation and his enjoyment of Ozark streams.

Lischer said he considers himself an environmentalist, but that he is opposed to the philosophy of "environmental obstructionism."

"They've made their point. I wish they'd get out of the way I don't think people want to go back to wilderness living," he said.

"The role of government is to set realistic standards in the pollution field. Much of what we're getting in legislation is emotionally developed."

Lischer said any increase in population requires more development and that tradeoffs with the environment are necessary.

Present terms expire in April 1978 for Mrs. Wilson, Zapf and Lischer.

T. Eugene Cravens of Mansfield was appointed to the commission by Bond in April 1976. He is a Democrat, a farmer with 1,400 head of cattle on 4,000 acres and chairman of the commission.

Cravens said he has tried to represent small towns and rural Missouri.

"Small communities were getting lower priority (for wastewater treatment grants) because of their density of population. I didn't think they were getting their share," he said.

Cravens said problems in small communities are "just as great for the individual person" as problems at large industrial plants and municipalities.

Raymond Sears of Savannah was appointed to the commission by Bond in April 1976. He is a Democrat and an attorney retired from private practice.

Sears said he remembers when the "pendulum swung all the way one way" and people were allowed to do anything to a stream. He said he wants to guard against "letting it swing the other way too far," with arbitrary regulations that would put municipalities, industry and farmers out of business.

Present terms for Cravens, Sears and a seat now vacant on the commission, will expire in April 1980. Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale, with Senate approval, will appoint someone to fill the vacancy. That appointee must be a Democrat, represent the general public and have knowledge and interest in water pollution control.

Commissioners said they are anxious for Teasdale to select someone so they can share their workload.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Watch pound of fat

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 29 year old, 5 feet 5, female, weighing 120 pounds. Last year I went on a diet and lost 35 pounds in four months. All my life I have been overweight and this is the first time I have been successful with a diet.

Since then I can't eat over 900 calories without gaining weight. I try to balance my diet as much as possible but I have no caloric room for bread and other starches or fats. My diet consists of vegetables, cottage cheese, fish, meat and skim milk. Everything I eat is weighed or measured and all calories counted. I average 32 grams of protein a day.

I started an exercise program of running a half mile plus doing setups and pushups 10 minutes each morning. Since then I have gained three pounds without eating more. Something seems to be wrong with my metabolism. Can you give me some suggestions?

I have increased my smoking and consume large amounts of coffee to hold back the hunger and I am so hungry for more good nutritious food. I am becoming very frustrated.

DEAR READER — You are paying too much attention to the scales. What you need is to prevent pounds of fat not pounds of just anything from accumulating.

You probably gained three pounds after exercising because you regained the normal water content of your body. Strict dieting is associated with an abnormal elimination of body water which makes the weight loss look impressive on the scales. Those pounds of water loss are quickly regained with normal sensible living habits.

I strongly disapprove of using cigarettes and coffee in large amounts for your weight control program. That can cause you to be a nervous wreck and develop habits that are really harmful to your health.

You need to develop some patience. I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet and you can use this as a pattern for a normal diet for you. It contains 1200 calories — not just 900. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Note the comments there about exercise. You need to develop and maintain a sensible exercise program. It will help a lot in enabling you to avoid obesity. Your protein intake is a little low, but you will get enough on the diet I am sending you.

Remember there is an equation for weight control, a balance between what you consume and what you use. You can affect your body fat by either limiting what you eat with a diet or by increasing your energy utilization. A combination of the two is usually the most successful. It should then be a lifestyle thereafter. Walking is one of the best exercises because so many people can walk long distances without overdoing it. Try to program an hour's walk into your day's program — even in divided amounts if necessary. You will use an extra 52 calories a mile and if you are able to walk three miles a day you will use an extra 150 calories a day. In a year's time that is equivalent to more than 15 pounds of fat. I'd rather see you walk than starve or smoke or swill down large amounts of coffee.

Because of the volume of mail Dr. Lamb cannot answer your letters personally but he will answer representative letters of general interest in his column. Write to him in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 1019.

SUPERMAN

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Even Superman gets older. Kirk Alyn, who played Superman in 30 movie serials in the late 1940s and early 1950s is now 66 years old and drawing Social Security checks.

"But I feel like I'm 39," the actor said. "And I wish they would stop offering me the same roles."

For years after producers stopped making the serials, Alyn found it difficult to get acting parts. Movie-makers felt the public wouldn't believe him as anybody other than Superman.

"Now I get offers, but it's only for detective roles," he lamented.

Segregation, intimidation flourish

Blacks still not free in Dawson, Ga.

By Tom Tiede

DAWSON, Ga. — (NEA) — When Jimmy Carter talks of human rights for Russians and other distant people, the black population of this prosaic hamlet wonders about the matter of priorities. They point out that Dawson is right here in America, 20 miles from the president's birthplace, yet genuine civil liberty is almost unknown.

For instance a local black woman has filed a complaint with the U.S. Justice Department in which she charges that her dentist forced her to enter his office through the back door. The front door is now and always has been for whites. Bad as things may be in Russia, the woman says she presumes its entrances are integrated.

Then there are the Dawson restaurants. Many of them are closed to citizens of African descent. There are no hard rules on it, and certainly the establishments have no public proclamations to this effect, yet segregation prevails by custom, and, again, local blacks know of no similar conditions in the Georgian area of the USSR.

No one here claims Dawson is worse than Moscow. In fact, blacks agree that "things are getting better." At least the town no longer permits colored men to be flogged in public. Gone also are the days when resident D.U. Pullium was beaten senseless for working with the NAACP. And, eat your heart out Ivan, everyone here may now vote in secret ballot.

Yet for all of the progress, and despite constitutional and congressional guarantees, Dawson blacks say they are still not free. Compared with the people of Moscow local Negroes have more liberties, but they say they have fewer compared with the people of Minneapolis or Mason City. Racially, Dawson is still of the Old South.

All resident blacks past their teens remember the Old South. Trees still stand outside town where Negroes were lynched. In the 1960s segregationists burned three black churches to the ground. Insurance salesman Lucius Holloway remembers conditions so raw that "the white folk took to hiring black Toms to do their killing."

It's not as bad anymore. For one thing the violence has stopped. Yet socially, economically, and politically, blacks say Dawson, Ga., pop. 9,000, clings tenaciously to its awful history.

Items: there are two swimming pools in town, one for whites and one for blacks; there is one golf and country club in the area, and its membership is exclusively white; the churches and fraternal organizations remain for the most part segregated; and the races automatically divide themselves in many waiting rooms.

According to the census, Dawson blacks outnumber the whites three to two. Yet the most popular community services cater to the minority. In its April 14 edition, Dawson's weekly newspaper printed photos of 18 people, all of them white. The area radio station is similarly oriented, as are many of the downtown [illegible].

Nowhere is the segregation more severe than in the educational system. When the courts forced Dawson's high school to begin admitting blacks in 1970, white parents immediately built a fallback barricade in the form of a private academy. Today the private school is all white, while the public institution is 99 per cent black.

The school matter has a special irony. Lucius Holloway says the public schools are still controlled by an all white board of education, but its members send their own children to the private academy. "Also," Holloway adds, "the daughter of the superintendent of schools has been the academy's homecoming queen. Can you beat it?"

Apparently, blacks can't beat it. What's more, Holloway says most of them here are not trying to beat it. "People are conditioned to be subordinated," he says, "the old fears die hard." For example, every black over the age of 18 may now vote. But do they? "They don't. They'll make up all sorts of excuses and just stay home."

Holloway says his own view of the franchise is steeped in emotion. He was the first black in Dawson to insist on voting in the same booth as whites (until the 1960s blacks were relegated to a basement booth in the courthouse).

BOOK REVIEW

SONS COME & GO, MOTHERS HANG IN FOREVER. By William Saroyan. McGraw-Hill. 211 Pages. $7.95.

Writers are a lot like runners. Some shine in the sprint, but then flicker, fade and are heard from no more. Others, and they are relatively few, have the strength and the skill to go the long distance, to keep on writing even though the glow which surrounded their early work has faded.

William Saroyan is one of the latter. His name isn't mentioned as often as it was when he was younger and writing such widely appealing things as "The Human Comedy," "The Time Of Your life," and "My Heart's in the Highlands." But he's still running the course, probably because he's wise enough to know that "even after you've won fame and fortune, every time you write you've got to write, there's no short-cut, you have to start your career all over again."

Saroyan's writing career has been a long one and he tells about it in the assorted pieces he has assembled in this charming memoir. He talks of his earliest years, some of them spent in a California orphanage, his youth, and his young manhood when he hung around a San Francisco bookstore "because print and publication, paper and binding, title page and margin, and all the rest of the business and reality of language in action has always seemed near to where I ought to be, something like my home, and my way."

But not all of this absorbing book is about Saroyan's determination to be a writer. There is much about the many people he has met and found memorable during the course of his long life, from such unknowns as his boyhood friend Eddie Emerian to the famous such as Greta Garbo, George Joan Nathan, Diego Rivera and the composer Jean Sibelius.

Which is not to say that while Saroyan found certain people memorable he also liked them. There were those he remembers with rancor as well as those remembered fondly.

This book is a charming trip through the years of one man's life, and even those who don't known Saroyan's work ought to enjoy it.

OUR SOUTHERN LANDSMAN. By Harry Golden. Putnam's. 254 Pages. $7.95.

"There were Jews in the South before there was a South. Spanish and Portuguese Jews. . .established the indigo trade in the Carolinas as early as 1720."

This is just one of the many thought-provoking facts Harry Golden presents to the fascinated reader in this most engrossing book which "describes the story of Jews in the South."

Golden, who moved to the South from New York more than 25 years ago, informally details . . these pages the stories of many Jews who made their homes in the South and the various contributions they made over the years, starting from before there was a South as such up to the present time.

There was Judah P. Benjamin, the "brains of the Confederacy," who served as right-hand man to Jefferson Davis; Rabbi David Einhorn, the abolitionist rabbi of Baltimore; David Levy Yulee, first Jewish member of the U.S. Senate, and Dr. Joseph Goldberger, whose work led to a cure for pellagra.

Good News Dept.

Our airlines did more in 1976 — more passengers, more safety, more freight, and more service than ever before.

They did all of this while using 800 million gallons less fuel than in 1973 when the fuel crunch hit. It's a conservation record few other industries can match.

Here at a glance is the airline performance checklist for 1976:

Safety — Best year in commercial aviation history.

Passengers — All-time high of 223 million passengers boarded — up 18 million from 1975.

Freight — Ton miles carried exceeded 5 billion for first time.

Mail — Eight out of every 10 first class intercity letters moved by air.

Fares — Average cost per mile to air travelers rose less than the Cost of Living Index. New fares are making air travel even more of a bargain.

Earnings — On revenues over $17 billion, earnings were about $400 million. This is just over 2¢ on each dollar — half the U.S. industry average.

Fuel Conservation — Compared with 1973, airlines used 8% less fuel while carrying 21 million more passengers — a 19% gain on passengers carried per gallon.

Looking to the future, it is forecast that airlines by 1982 will be carrying more than 300 million passengers a year — 400 million annually within a decade. This will require airlines to spend billions of dollars to modernize with quieter, more fuel-efficient jets.

As the predominant intercity public transportation system, our airlines expect they will continue to help meet the nation's energy challenge while keeping America on the move.

Cowan is top Gideon grad

GIDEON — Miss Barbra E. Cowan has been named valedictorian of the Gideon High school 1977 senior class and Miss Kathie Jean Chamblin is salutatorian.

Miss Cowan, daughter of Mrs. Rosa Cowan of Gideon, has received many honors and awards in high school. She has received scholastic awards in history, art, business education, math and biology.

She is a member of the National Honor Society and the high school chorus and received the Betty Crocker Homemaker of the Year Award.

She has been a member of the superintendent's list for three years. Students must maintain an A-average to qualify for this list.

Barbra Cowan

She plans to enter some field of civil service.

Miss Chamblin is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Chamblin of Gideon. She is a member of the National Honor Society, pep club, student council and president of the student body. She is a cheerleader, on the superintendent's list and has been chosen Student of the Month.

She has received awards in history, business education and driver education, as well as honorable mentions in various subjects.

Her future plans are to attend college at Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau and major in accounting.

But not all of this absorbing book is about Saroyan's determination to be a writer. There is much about the many people he has met and found memorable during the course of his long life, from such unknowns as his boyhood friend Eddie Emerian to the famous such as Greta Garbo, George Joan Nathan, Diego Rivera and the composer Jean Sibelius.

Which is not to say that while Saroyan found certain people memorable he also liked them. There were those he remembers with rancor as well as those remembered fondly.

This book is a charming trip through the years of one man's life, and even those who don't known Saroyan's work ought to enjoy it.

OUR SOUTHERN LANDSMAN. By Harry Golden. Putnam's. 254 Pages. $7.95.

"There were Jews in the South before there was a South. Spanish and Portuguese Jews. . .established the indigo trade in the Carolinas as early as 1720."

This is just one of the many thought-provoking facts Harry Golden presents to the fascinated reader in this most engrossing book which "describes the story of Jews in the South."

Golden, who moved to the South from New York more than 25 years ago, informally details . . these pages the stories of many Jews who made their homes in the South and the various contributions they made over the years, starting from before there was a South as such up to the present time.

There was Judah P. Benjamin, the "brains of the Confederacy," who served as right-hand man to Jefferson Davis; Rabbi David Einhorn, the abolitionist rabbi of Baltimore; David Levy Yulee, first Jewish member of the U.S. Senate, and Dr. Joseph Goldberger, whose work led to a cure for pellagra.

Good News Dept.

Our airlines did more in 1976 — more passengers, more safety, more freight, and more service than ever before.

They did all of this while using 800 million gallons less fuel than in 1973 when the fuel crunch hit. It's a conservation record few other industries can match.

Here at a glance is the airline performance checklist for 1976:

Safety — Best year in commercial aviation history.

Passengers — All-time high of 223 million passengers boarded — up 18 million from 1975.

Freight — Ton miles carried exceeded 5 billion for first time.

Mail — Eight out of every 10 first class intercity letters moved by air.

Fares — Average cost per mile to air travelers rose less than the Cost of Living Index. New fares are making air travel even more of a bargain.

Earnings — On revenues over $17 billion, earnings were about $400 million. This is just over 2¢ on each dollar — half the U.S. industry average.

Fuel Conservation — Compared with 1973, airlines used 8% less fuel while carrying 21 million more passengers — a 19% gain on passengers carried per gallon.

Looking to the future, it is forecast that airlines by 1982 will be carrying more than 300 million passengers a year — 400 million annually within a decade. This will require airlines to spend billions of dollars to modernize with quieter, more fuel-efficient jets.

As the predominant intercity public transportation system, our airlines expect they will continue to help meet the nation's energy challenge while keeping America on the move.

'In The Frame' By Francis Is Intrigue-Packed

IN THE FRAME. By Dick Francis. Harper & Row. 230 Pages. $8.95.

Fans of Dick Francis' fast-paced mystery novels may be a bit surprised by "In The Frame," since horse racing, a central theme in his other books, is shunted to the sidelines this time out.

It doesn't really matter, though. Francis delivers a hard-hitting, spell-binding plot in quick-moving prose that charges along to a most satisfactory conclusion.

Charles Todd, a 29-year-old British painter, is the man on whom the plot centers. Todd has set aside his painting for a bit in order to take a holiday at his cousin's home, but when he arrives he finds his cousin's house crowded with police. It seems that while the cousin was at his job, burglars broke into the home, stole a valuable collection of antiques — including some paintings — and murdered the cousin's wife.

Todd stays about trying to help his cousin readjust to life, but then comes across a most unusual coincidence — or is it a coincidence? A woman he meets at the race track — and a dandy person she is, too — tells him about her house being burned while she was on holiday and the fire presumably destroying her valuable collection of antiques — including some paintings. Todd is intrigued. He scouts the ruins of the woman's house but finds no evidence that any antiques were destroyed by the blaze.

Since the police are aloof to Todd's suspicions, he determines to go it alone and his investigation takes him into the heart of an art world in which famous paintings are forged or stolen or both. Francis' asides into the workings of the world of art are most interesting, adding to an intriguing plot and not slowing it down at all.

Todd's investigation leads him to Australia and New Zealand, almost costs him his life and, at times, seems to be going the wrong way. But Francis sorts everything out nicely at the end, leaving no strings untied.

Collectors Buy Minichecks Used To Ease Italy's Change Shortage

By MICHAEL J. DUFFY

ROME (AP) — Minichecks, the latest stopgap remedy for Italy's chronic shortage of small change, have already become collectors' items.

A 100-lire — 12-cent — certified check put out last year by Banco di Napoli in Reggio Calabria might get turned down by a wary newsstand dealer. But you could get as much as 250,000 lire — $283 — for it at current market prices among collectors.

"I have sold 200,000-lire-worth of minichecks already today and only 20,000-lire-worth of Roman coins," a coin dealer said during a busy Sunday morning at Rome's flea market. "The Roman coins are 2,000 years old, and these minichecks are less than two years old."

His stand is just one of a half dozen in the flea market doing a thriving business in minichecks.

The original idea behind the minichecks was to fill the gap caused by the government mint's inability to keep up with the demand for coins. The simplest chores had been immensely complicated by the search for change — producing the 50-lire fare on the buses or to pay highway tolls, purchasing a newspaper or a cup of coffee, mailing a letter or buying an aspirin to deal with the other headaches.

Shoppers without change often returned home with a pocketful of bartered goods — a piece of hard candy from the coffee bar, a sprig of parsley from the market, a bandage from the pharmacy, an extra stamp from the post office.

To help solve the problem, the banks last year began printing minichecks in 50 to 300-lire denominations as certified checks or as checks against the accounts of specific customers. Soon there was a flood of minichecks to tatter in everybody's pockets.

Some judges questioned their legality and an undersecretary in the Treasury Ministry issued a widely publicized statement recently that the minichecks were of doubtful legitimacy.

This raised doubts in the minds of some merchants, who began refusing to accept the minichecks. But it created a boom business for collectors, and the craze is beginning to spread abroad, especially to West Germany, dealers say.

The latest minicheck catalogue on the flea market stands includes an editor's note which says the lack of endorsements as the checks pass from one person to the next "attributes to them the function of substitute money, reserved by law to the state and the Bank of Italy.

Though colored and designed like checks, they are about one-quarter the normal size.

Anticancer drugs thought to increase cancer risk

DENVER (AP) — Patients treated with a widely used family of anticancer drugs run a higher risk of later developing a second form of cancer apparently caused by the treatment, says a major new study.

National Cancer Institute scientists said Tuesday that women treated for cancer of the ovary with alkylating agent drugs have a significant risk of eventually getting acute nonlymphocytic leukemia, a treatable blood cancer.

Doctors attending the annual meeting of the American Society of Clinical Oncology said the findings are important because alkylating agents are used to treat a wide variety of malignancies, including breast cancer.

Researchers cautioned against undue alarm about the findings. Alkylating agents are responsible for the long term survival of many patients who wouldn't be alive to be concerned about secondary cancers if it were not for the drugs, they said.

Commenting on the study, Dr. Vincent T. DeVita, director of NCI's cancer treatment division, said risks of later cancer should be "considered minimal" compared with risks of the first cancers the drugs were used against.

"To some degree, this is a measure of improved treatment," he said in an interview. "Ten years ago we didn't have to worry about second cancers because all the patients died."

However, DeVita said, doctors said should consider using other treatments for early, less severe cancers if further study bears out an increased risk of later cancer with alkylating agents.

For advanced cancer, risk of treatment would not exceed risk from the disease and the most effective therapy should be used, he added.

Other doctors at the meeting commented privately that there still is debate over what is an "early" or "less severe" cancer and that these distinctions may be hard to make in choosing the therapy.

The new study was compiled by Drs. Ronald R. Reimer, Robert Hoover, Joseph F. Fraumeni Jr., and Robert C. Young from data on ovarian cancer patients supplied by 51 cancer centers around the country.

Looking at a group of 5,455 ovarian cancer patients, 4,324 of whom had alkylating agent chemotherapy, the scientists identified 13 patients with acute nonlymphocytic leukemia. All 13 had alkylating treatment, including nine who also had radiation therapy.

Compared to the rate of this acute leukemia in the general population, the ovarian cancer patients had a 21-fold increased risk of leukemia. Looking only at patients who had alkylating chemotherapy and whose cases were followed for more than two years, relative risk increased to 171 times, the study said.

Campground renovation under way

JEFFERSON CITY — A major campground renovation program is under way at Johnson's Shut-Ins State Park, closing part of the camping area from now until Memorial Day, according to Missouri Department of Natural Resources Director Carolyn Ashford.

During renovation of the camping area, 30 to 35 campsites of the total 140 will be closed to campers, said Mrs. Ashford, and by the time the project is completed total campsites at the park will number about 60.

The project was undertaken due to overcrowded and deteriorated conditions in the camping area. After improvements are completed, camper should have more room and park superintendents will be better able to manage the camping area.

Mrs. Ashford reminded that all campsites in Missouri state parks are available on a "first come, first served" basis. As Johnson's Shut-Ins is a popular park, especially during the summer months, she recommends that families use the camping facilities more during weekdays and less during weekends so that more persons can enjoy camping at the state park.

Johnson's Shut-Ins is located in northeastern Reynolds County, eight miles north of Lesterville on County Road M. Campers who cannot find campsites at the park may find opportunities nearby at two private camping areas and National Forest area.

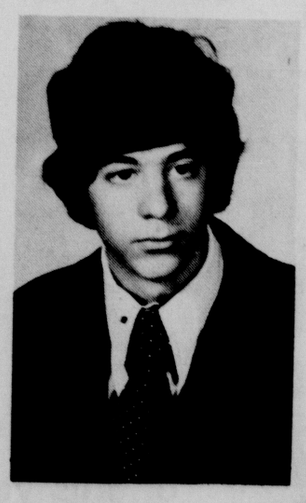
Wagoner graduates at Subiaco



Tony Wagoner

ORAN— Tony Wagoner, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Wagoner of Oran, was among the 60 seniors of Subiaco Academy receiving diplomas May 14, in the school's 89th commencement exercises in the Quadrangle of New Subiaco Abbey.

Wagoner's diploma was presented by Abbot Raphael DeSalvo, O.S.B., president of the 99-year-old Arkansas Benedictine Institution. George Coury, a financier from Miami, Fla. and a 1924 alumnus of the Academy, delivered the commencement address.

Wagoner was also recognized for his achievement and sportsmanship in intramural sports by receiving a certificate of merit from the physical education department.

During his four years at Subiaco, Wagoner was active in basketball and track, each for two years, and in the Student Council. He was also a class representative during his junior year.

'Age of Uncertainty' By Galbraith Is a 'Must Read'

THE AGE OF UNCERTAINTY. By John Kenneth Galbraith. Houghton Mifflin. 365 Pages. $15.95.

To write about complex subjects for popular consumption is not an easy task. Especially if the subject is one which laymen actively avoid. A subject such as economics and the effects it has had on cultural development.

One of the few able to translate the seemingly arcane into understandable prose which is not simplistic is John Kenneth Galbraith. He has done so in the past with such eminently readable books as "The Affluent Society" and "Money: Whence It Came, Where It Went" and he succeeds admirably once again with "The Age Of Uncertainty," a lavishly-illustrated, lively look at world history as seen from the economic point of view.

The crux of Galbraith's book is that prior to World War I, social progress, if it could be called that, developed with relative certainty. After the great conflict, things became, to say the least, uncertain. As the author observes, "It was then (World War I) that political and social systems centuries in the building came apart — sometimes in a matter of weeks. And others were permanently transformed. It was in World War I that the age-old certainties were lost. Until then aristocrats and capitalists felt secure in their position, and even socialists felt certain in their faith. It was never to be so again."

Campground renovation under way

JEFFERSON CITY — A major campground renovation program is under way at Johnson's Shut-Ins State Park, closing part of the camping area from now until Memorial Day, according to Missouri Department of Natural Resources Director Carolyn Ashford.

During renovation of the camping area, 30 to 35 campsites of the total 140 will be closed to campers, said Mrs. Ashford, and by the time the project is completed total campsites at the park will number about 60.

The project was undertaken due to overcrowded and deteriorated conditions in the camping area. After improvements are completed, camper should have more room and park superintendents will be better able to manage the camping area.

Mrs. Ashford reminded that all campsites in Missouri state parks are available on a "first come, first served" basis. As Johnson's Shut-Ins is a popular park, especially during the summer months, she recommends that families use the camping facilities more during weekdays and less during weekends so that more persons can enjoy camping at the state park.

Johnson's Shut-Ins is located in northeastern Reynolds County, eight miles north of Lesterville on County Road M. Campers who cannot find campsites at the park may find opportunities nearby at two private camping areas and National Forest area.

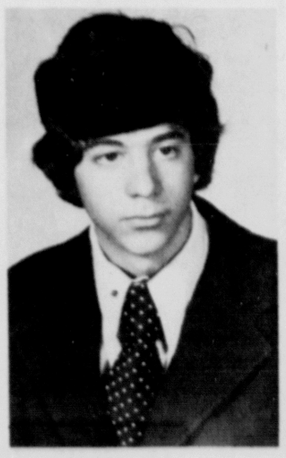
Wagoner graduates at Subiaco



Tony Wagoner

ORAN— Tony Wagoner, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Wagoner of Oran, was among the 60 seniors of Subiaco Academy receiving diplomas May 14, in the school's 89th commencement exercises in the Quadrangle of New Subiaco Abbey.

Wagoner's diploma was presented by Abbot Raphael DeSalvo, O.S.B., president of the 99-year-old Arkansas Benedictine Institution. George Coury, a financier from Miami, Fla. and a 1924 alumnus of the Academy, delivered the commencement address.

Wagoner was also recognized for his achievement and sportsmanship in intramural sports by receiving a certificate of merit from the physical education department.

During his four years at Subiaco, Wagoner was active in basketball and track, each for two years, and in the Student Council. He was also a class representative during his junior year.

'Age of Uncertainty' By Galbraith Is a 'Must Read'

THE AGE OF UNCERTAINTY. By John Kenneth Galbraith. Houghton Mifflin. 365 Pages. $15.95.

To write about complex subjects for popular consumption is not an easy task. Especially if the subject is one which laymen actively avoid. A subject such as economics and the effects it has had on cultural development.

One of the few able to translate the seemingly arcane into understandable prose which is not simplistic is John Kenneth Galbraith. He has done so in the past with such eminently readable books as "The Affluent Society" and "Money: Whence It Came, Where It Went" and he succeeds admirably once again with "The Age Of Uncertainty," a lavishly-illustrated, lively look at world history as seen from the economic point of view.

The crux of Galbraith's book is that prior to World War I, social progress, if it could be called that, developed with relative certainty. After the great conflict, things became, to say the least, uncertain. As the author observes, "It was then (World War I) that political and social systems centuries in the building came apart — sometimes in a matter of weeks. And others were permanently transformed. It was in World War I that the age-old certainties were lost. Until then aristocrats and capitalists felt secure in their position, and even socialists felt certain in their faith. It was never to be so again."

Senate approval in doubt for revising Sunday sales law

By STEVE ROSEN
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Efforts to revise the state's Sunday sales act — benefiting the Kansas City area only — may be stalled in the Senate this session unless the bill receives support from legislators outside those affected counties.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Phillip P. Scaglia, D-Kansas City, calls for a referendum by local voters in Jackson, Clay and Platte counties — all in the Kansas City area.

The latest attempt by Scaglia, who led last year's unsuccessful drive, marks the first time legislation banning the sale of nonessential items on Sunday has reached the Senate floor. Debate on the bill is soon expected to begin.

"I'm not worried about votes from the Kansas City area senators," Scaglia said. But some senators outside of Kansas City are not totally in favor of the bill.

After talking with 24 of the 34 senators, Scaglia said there are about seven legislators from unaffected areas who either are against it or are undecided about the legislation.

"Right now, I'd say there is a little less than a 50-50 chance of passage," Scaglia said.

The Sunday sales act, known as the "blue law," was enacted in 1963. Since declared constitutional, the legislature has been the scene of a yearly battle for repeal. The law prohibits the sale of most kinds of merchandise except food and drugs on Sunday.

Scaglia's House-endorsed bill was one of 11 anti-blue law bills introduced this session.

The Senate Local Government Committee also supported the bill. Other bills ranging from statewide repeal to a statewide referendum are in committees, but those bills are essentially killed because it is too late in the session for them to be considered.

"This is the only bill that has a chance of passing," said Sen. Phil Snowden, Gladstone, who will handle the bill in the Senate. "I don't know the strength of our support, but we'll live or die with this local option," he added.

Opposition to the local option approach comes mostly from senators who say the repeal will have negative economic effects on small merchants and will not noticeably increase revenues for merchants competing against Kansas stores which are not regulated by blue laws. Some senators also believe Sunday should be a day of rest.

"I've not totally made up my mind yet, but I tend to oppose the bill," said Sen. Joe Frappier, R-St. Charles. "Small businessmen would be annihilated."

Should only three of Missouri's 114 counties benefit from repealing the blue law? Scaglia and opponents of the bill agree this issue is a tourchy subject.

"It's a dangerous practice repealing the law on a piecemeal basis," said Sen. Emory Melton, R-Cassville. He said he opposed the bill "because we're letting only three counties have a chance."

Scaglia said he is not ready for a statewide referendum though he thinks most people favor repeal.

If his legislation is declared law, Scaglia believes next session the Missouri General Assembly could go back and review the effects of the repeal in the three counties. "Then if the legislature elects to go ahead and enlarge the repeal, they could go ahead and do it," he said.

Soybean growers want merchandising council

By STEVE ROSEN
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Soybean farmers could increase their crop production and open new overseas trade markets if the Missouri General Assembly revises a law for establishing commodity merchandising councils.

Revision of the current statute would be a boon for all farmers, but especially for soybean farmers — producers of the state's largest cash and export crop. Last year, soybean producers sought unsuccessfully to revise the statute.

A soybean commodity merchandising council would allow the state Department of Agriculture to collect a half cent for every bushel of soybeans sold at the first point of sale from consenting farmers. The council would not require mandatory collection of revenue from the state's approximately 40,000 producers.

The money would be earmarked for research development at state universities and market promotion by the Agriculture Development Division of the Department of Agriculture. Money generated for a council would be close to $400,000, said Ellsworth Stewart, president of the Missouri Soybean Growers Association.

Although soybeans have been a shining light in Missouri agriculture, Stewart believes there is a need to increase soybean production along with finding new markets abroad.

Compared to the 1975 national average of 50 per cent of the soybean crop shipped abroad, Missouri exported a healthy 65 per cent of its soybeans. Also, in 1975, soybeans represented about 25 per cent of a Missouri farmer's gross receipts.

So, is there really a need for soybean farmers to worry? "Sure there is," Stewart said. "We've had problems with increasing yields. Production has been stagnant. Contributions from the council would go toward research for solving these problems," he said.

First, technology need to be improved, he said. "This could lead to increased soybean production and more importantly, new markets."

While Missouri farmers presently compete with foreign countries for trade, Stewart believes new export markets must be cultivated. "Without markets overseas. there is no reason to grow soybeans," he said.

With a soybean council, personnel from the state Agriculture Development Division would travel to foreign countries to teach persons there how to effectively use soybeans.

A soybean merchandising council would be an effective way to help farmers, he said. Presently, commodity merchandising councils have been established for apple, egg, peach and turkey producers. The National Farmers Organization also has its own commodity merchandising council.

A proposed law which is awaiting final Senate approval before being sent to the House holds out hope for soybean growers. The bill makes small, but important, changes in procedures for establishing a council, said the bill's sponsor, Sen. Nelson Tinnin, D-Hornersville.

Public hearings and a referendum of the commodity producers of the commodity would determine whether a council would be established. Tinnin's bill would loosen requirements to approve a council by doing away with a stipulation requiring a majority of votes from all registered producers. Instead, a majority of votes cast would be needed.

"We're committed to revising the current statute," Stewart said. The referendum process, however, could take about a year and a half, he said.

THE WONDERFUL KANGAROO

"The Wonderful Kangaroo", a television special sponsored by Textron Inc., features Kangaroos as they bound across the endless plains of Australia. But "down under" these delightful creatures are causing some zany problems and hopping up in crazy places.

Roos on the Road

It seems that Kangaroos have no traffic sense at all and are a menace on the roads. Some say that a Roo's rule of the road is: Look both ways, then cross regardless.

Have you ever heard of "roo-guards"? Well, if you were from the Australian countryside, where Kangaroos are often attracted to the freshly cut grass along the roadside, you would have these heavy bumpers on your car for protection from the devastating impact.

Many wild animals learn to avoid the roads, but in a country where there are twice as many Roos as people, the Australian government has posted warnings on roads throughout the countryside — Beware of Kangaroos!

A car insurance company in Queensland had so many claims for Roo damage from one area that they sent an inspector to investigate. He got home eventually, but in the meantime his own auto was wrecked by hitting a Kangaroo.

Dinner for Two Roos

Roos also represent a real threat to local farming. Nocturnal animals, they appear on fields across Australia evenings at dusk—charming though they may be, these lovable villains are eating many farmers out of house and home. Imagine a farmer looking out his window and seeing a mother Roo and her baby "Joey" munching on a newly planted crop of wheat!

In spite of these problems, the Australian government and its people view the lovable Roo as a vital part of the national scene as well as a symbol of Australia recognized throughout the world. Millions of tax dollars go to protect the Roos each year.
